Hoover, Good American. G. M., Will Make Them. Religion Gives Peace. Science, Wealth, Knowledge.

—By ARTHUR BRISBANE—

(Copyright, 1928.)

PRESIDENT JORDAN, president emeritus of Stanford University is for Hoover, whom he describes as eanest, brilliant, possessing knowledge that the country needs and a good American.

WHAT is a good American? Herbert Hoover's name is a good answer. He is a good American, has proved it, and his Americanism is based on experience. He has traveled widely over the world, exercising his profession as an engineer, in China, in Europe. And where he went, he succeeded.

IN HIS visits abroad Herbert Hoover learned, as Benjamin Franklin did, in France and in England, just why this is the best country, why Americans are fortunate in being born Americans. He doesn't have to guess about it. He knows.

BORN in the West, Mr. Hoover studied in California, which has been his residence for a great many years. He went abroad as seafaring captain. Went in the old days of American shipping, as an engineer, because that was his business. He went to work at his profession. The more he saw of other countries, the better American he became.

HERBERT HOOVER, as head of the Department of Commerce attacked the British monopoly that regulates the world price of rubber and made millions of Americans pay double for tires. It was Hoover that forced the British combination to reduce the price of rubber, as every tire maker will testify. That attack on the British monopoly, which was sending hundreds of millions of American dollars into British pockets, did not please Britain. But it was a good thing for the United States, and it showed the sort of American that Hoover is.

MR. HOOVER'S work in dealing with the Mississippi disaster which President Coolidge intrusted to him, was that of a profoundly learned and unselfish man willing to sacrifice comfort, time and energy to hard work in great energy.

MR. HOOVER understands great national improvements that the country needs, Boulder Dam, canals from the Great Lakes to the ocean and Gulf. And he would be able to do the work that the country needs done.

HERBERT HOOVER, when he talks about America, knows what he is talking about. When he talks of other countries, informing American business men as to the opportunities for selling American goods abroad he is discussing matters that he understands. Thousands of business men will testify to the good that Mr. Hoover has done as the head of the Department of Commerce.

AN OVERWHELMING majority of those that voted for President Coolidge, electing him with millions of votes to spare, would like to vote for him again, since he has only been elected once and would be running for a second, not a third elective term, in 1928. But the President has decided, and millions that know they cannot have Coolidge, will be delighted to have Hoover, a good American.

GENERAL MOTORS says it is not going to make airplanes. This column predicts that General Motors, eventually will make airplanes. Messrs. Sloan, Dupont and their able engineers and ambitious super-mechanics will not remain out of that which is destined to be the world's most important, and perhaps greatest industry.

A FEW years ago Henry Ford told this writer "the airplane is not a commercial success, and I am not going into that field." Reminded that the automobile was not a commercial success, either, when he made his first little gasoline buggy, Mr. Ford reported that he would not make airplanes. He is making them now, sold nearly a million dollars worth last year. And while he loses money on every machine he will make money eventually. Meanwhile he renders a great service to his country. And his three-engine plane is a good, safe, all-metal machine. Get one.

PROFESSOR Northrop of Yale says the world must look to an inductive philosophy of science for a solution of the problem of religion. "Science only can tell us whether the universe as we know it provides any concrete meaning for the claims of religion."

SCIENCE and religion are and must remain separate. Science gradually reveals to men that which they can explain and understand. Religion, which changes as men's civilization changes, represents the effort to know and understand that which men can never know or understand. Religion, destined to remain a matter of faith, never to be proved, is at least as important as science. Science gives knowledge, safety and wealth. Religion gives peace.

FRIEDERICH WILHELM, formerly Crown Prince of Germany, calls Mussolini "a genius who has arisen opportunely in Europe, where so many mediocrities are sprouting." Mussolini is doing what the Hohenzollerns would like to do.

NEW YORK school teachers are ordered to give children instruction in the harmful effects of alcohol. That order, based on a law 25 years old, is especially necessary with the modern brands of whisky. Formerly children were warned that they might avoid whisky when grown. Now, unfortunately, the warning is needed to keep them from whisky in high school.

Breaking Mine Pact "Prosaic" News Tidbit, Senator Is Told

SENATOR WHEELER

"DIDN'T the Pittsburgh newspapers come to you for news," Senator Wheeler asked C. E. Lesher, vice president of the Pittsburgh Coal Company, during the Senate investigation of the mine strike yesterday, "and didn't you decline to give it to them?"

"Yes," answered Lesher, "we sometimes told them we had nothing to say. We saw things from different angles. Our things are prosaic, and the things they were interested in publishing are sensational."

"There is nothing prosaic, is there," asked Senator Wheeler, "about the Pittsburgh Coal Company's abrogating a contract?"

"That was a matter of policy and a legal matter."

ELSIE HATTON

Miss Elsie Hatton, 23, of 2583 Charles street, was robbed of her purse last night after the bandit, who accosted her at Galveston and Beech avenues, had knocked her to the pavement with a blow from the butt of a revolver. She is in the Presbyterian Hospital. Her purse was empty.

REMORSE GRIPS DYING SLAYER OF BABIES

Conscious now of the fearful tragedy, wrought by her own hands, in choking out the life of her two babies, Mrs. Catherine Ward, 25, of 7314 Hamilton avenue, writhes in mental agony in the Pittsburgh Hospital as the death shadow hovers after an attempt to end her own life by slashing her wrists and taking poison.

The woman appeared yesterday in the home of a neighbor with blood pouring from her wounds and told of strangling her boy, Billy, Jr., 2½, and Dorothy May, 8 months, saying, "Both are dead — they are better off."

Physicians at the hospital say her condition, after swallowing bichloride of mercury tablets and losing much blood from superficial wounds on the arms, is rendered more critical by the realization of her act in killing the tots.

William Ward, husband and father, bowed in grief over the tragedy that has wrecked his home, after aiding in funeral arrangements for the little victims, spent most of his time at the bedside of his wife, whom he characterized as a devoted mother and ideal homekeeper.

He ascribed her rash act to a nervous condition that has prevailed for several months, and said that "something snapped in her brain."

An examination to determine Mrs. Ward's sanity will be held, it was indicated today, if she recovers from effects of the poison and razor blade wounds.

CHARGE CHURCH PLOT

WASHINGTON, March 9.—(AP.)—The Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America were accused today of conspiring with coal operators in the drafting of a report to "whitewash the operators of blame for the distressing situation in the Pennsylvania coal fields," by Oliver K. Eaton, United Mine Workers' attorney.

Testifying before the Senate committee investigating the bituminous coal situation, Eaton offered a bulletin of the National Coal Association and said:

"I make the direct charge, based upon the information given here, that there is collusion between the Federal Council of the Church of Christ in America and the coal operators."

The bulletin referred to by Eaton, dated March 3, 1928, quoted F. Ernest Johnson, executive secretary of the Federal Council of Churches of Christ in America, as authority for news of the pending issuance of "a report on conditions in the bituminous mining industry in Western Pennsylvania."

The bulletin said the report "is prepared by the council at the instance of the organization of the organization of the Protestant churches in Pittsburgh."

WASHINGTON, March 9.—Nervous but defiant, often pausing to sip mineral water, William G. Warden, chairman of the board of directors of the Pittsburgh Coal Company, today told the Senate Interstate Commerce Committee, which is investigating the coal strike, that when he proposed to discard the Jacksonville wage agreement with the United Mine Workers before the date set for its expiration the plan met with the unanimous approval of the directors, R. B. Mellon and Augustus K. Oliver, who were said in widely circulated rumors to have op-

HENDERSHOT NEAR DEATH

VOLTS SHOCK INVENTOR

WASHINGTON, March 9.—Lester J. Hendershot, 32, Pitttsburgh inventor of the so-called fuel-less motor, is in critical condition in Emergency Hospital here, paralyzed by shocks he received when testing a motor.

L. J. HENDERSHOT

Hendershot told physicians 2,200 volts of electricity had charged his body. His arms and legs were paralyzed when, made speechless by the shock, he was admitted to the hospital Tuesday.

EXPERIMENTING

It was believed that Hendershot was experimenting further with the motor which was turned down last week by the Guggenheim Foundation, aviation group with which Col. Lindbergh is associated.

Refusal of the Guggenheim interests to accept the "fuel-less" claims made for the invention are believed to have spurred him to further laboratory activities.

The patient was admitted to the hospital Tuesday, unable to move his arms or legs or use his palate. Doctors said the members were paralyzed. After five hours' treatment, he recovered sufficiently to say he had been experimenting with a motor and believed 2,000 volts of electricity passed through his body.

Hendershot left word he would see only J. Barr Peat, his associate, who came here with him on Sunday, and Col. Breckenridge, legal adviser to Col. Charles A. Lindbergh.

Peat could not be reached today at the hotel where he and Hendershot were registered.

It was not learned where the accident to the inventor occurred. Mystery had cloaked the movements of both Hendershot and Peat since their arrival here.

Today the patient could eat, but nerves in his arms and legs were still partly paralyzed. No one was permitted in his room except the doctor.

Hendershot gave his local address as the Lee House, where he and Peat registered last Sunday.

Peat dodged interviewers today as he had ever since his arrival. At the Lee House, however, it was said

Chamber Must Answer Charge of Coal Taint

The revelation in Washington that the Pittsburgh Chamber of Commerce was one of the wheels within a wheel, in what is charged, and seems to be proven, was a gigantic conspiracy to destroy the miners' union, is a blow calculated to shake our faith in respected neighbors and fellow men.

It was testified by a coal company official that the Chamber of Commerce actually accepted money from the Pittsburgh Coal Company to pay the salary of a Chamber of Commerce "expert" whose real duty, it appears, was to undermine the miners. Instead of being "neutral," instead of using its good offices to bring peace to the district, it appears to have been working for one side only in an industrial dispute, and doing it in a most underhanded and reprehensible way.

Of course, it is realized that the Chamber of Commerce, in its narrowest sense, is supposed to be representative of business interests, rather than labor interests, but it also is supposed to be motivated to some extent by higher civic ideals as well. It is rather staggering to have the illusion thus destroyed.

With the accusation against it of having accepted this money, it is incumbent upon the Chamber of Commerce to make an explanation to this community as soon as possible.

We should like to have our ideals and faith restored.

'MISS PITTSBURGH '26' HELD; HUNT MAN

By International News Service.

DETROIT, March 9.—Miss Thelma Williams, 22-year-old beauty who in 1926 appeared as "Miss Pittsburgh" in the Atlantic City beauty contest, is being held by police today while federal authorities seek a man said to have staged beauty contests in various cities which Miss Williams invariably won.

Thomas C. Wilcox, head of the Detroit office of the Department of Justice, said that the man involved in the case has left Detroit. His arrest on a Mann act charge is expected.

MARRIAGE REVEALED

With the arrest of Thelma Williams, the "Miss Pittsburgh of 1926," at Detroit, comes to light the fact that the beauty was married shortly afer her return from the Atlantic City pageant.

Miss Williams, now Mrs. Jesse W. Gray, of State College, is being held in Detroit pending the arrival of her mother who claims the daughter left the home in company with a beauty contest promot who promised her a stage career.

Rev. Lawrence Bair, of the First Reformed Church in Greensburg, married the bathing beauty and the State College youth on September 21, 1926, but the affair was kept secret while "Miss Pittsburgh" reaped the tidy fortune that falls to the lot of winers of inter-city beauty contests. Public appearances and stage presentations, with profit the consideration, engaged "Miss Pittsburgh" while the city remained ignorant of the wedding.

Miss Williams came from Port Mathilda, Pa., and there was considerable objection voiced that a resident of that remote town should represent Pittsburgh at Atlantic City, but the pageant director refused to enter the discussion if the promoters of the local beauty contest were satisfied with the girl.

C. of C., Accused, Silent

No explanation was vouchsafed by the Pittsburgh Chamber of Commerce today as to its strange ethics in permitting the Pittsburgh Coal Company to pay the salary of an expert, ostensibly employed by the Chamber, to make a neutral survey of the bituminous coal situation in 1925.

MINER FIRED "OVER TESTIMONY TO SENATORS" GETS JOB BACK

COAL HEAD DENIES OUSTER

Charles Barr, of Pricedale, fired by the Pittsburgh Coal Company because his wife "talked too much," according to his own affidavit, has been re-employed, it was learned here today.

C. E. Lesher, executive vice president of the company, who testified before a Senate committee in Washington yesterday, apparently does not know about Barr's re-employment yet. Mr. Lesher said Barr had not been fired "for that reason."

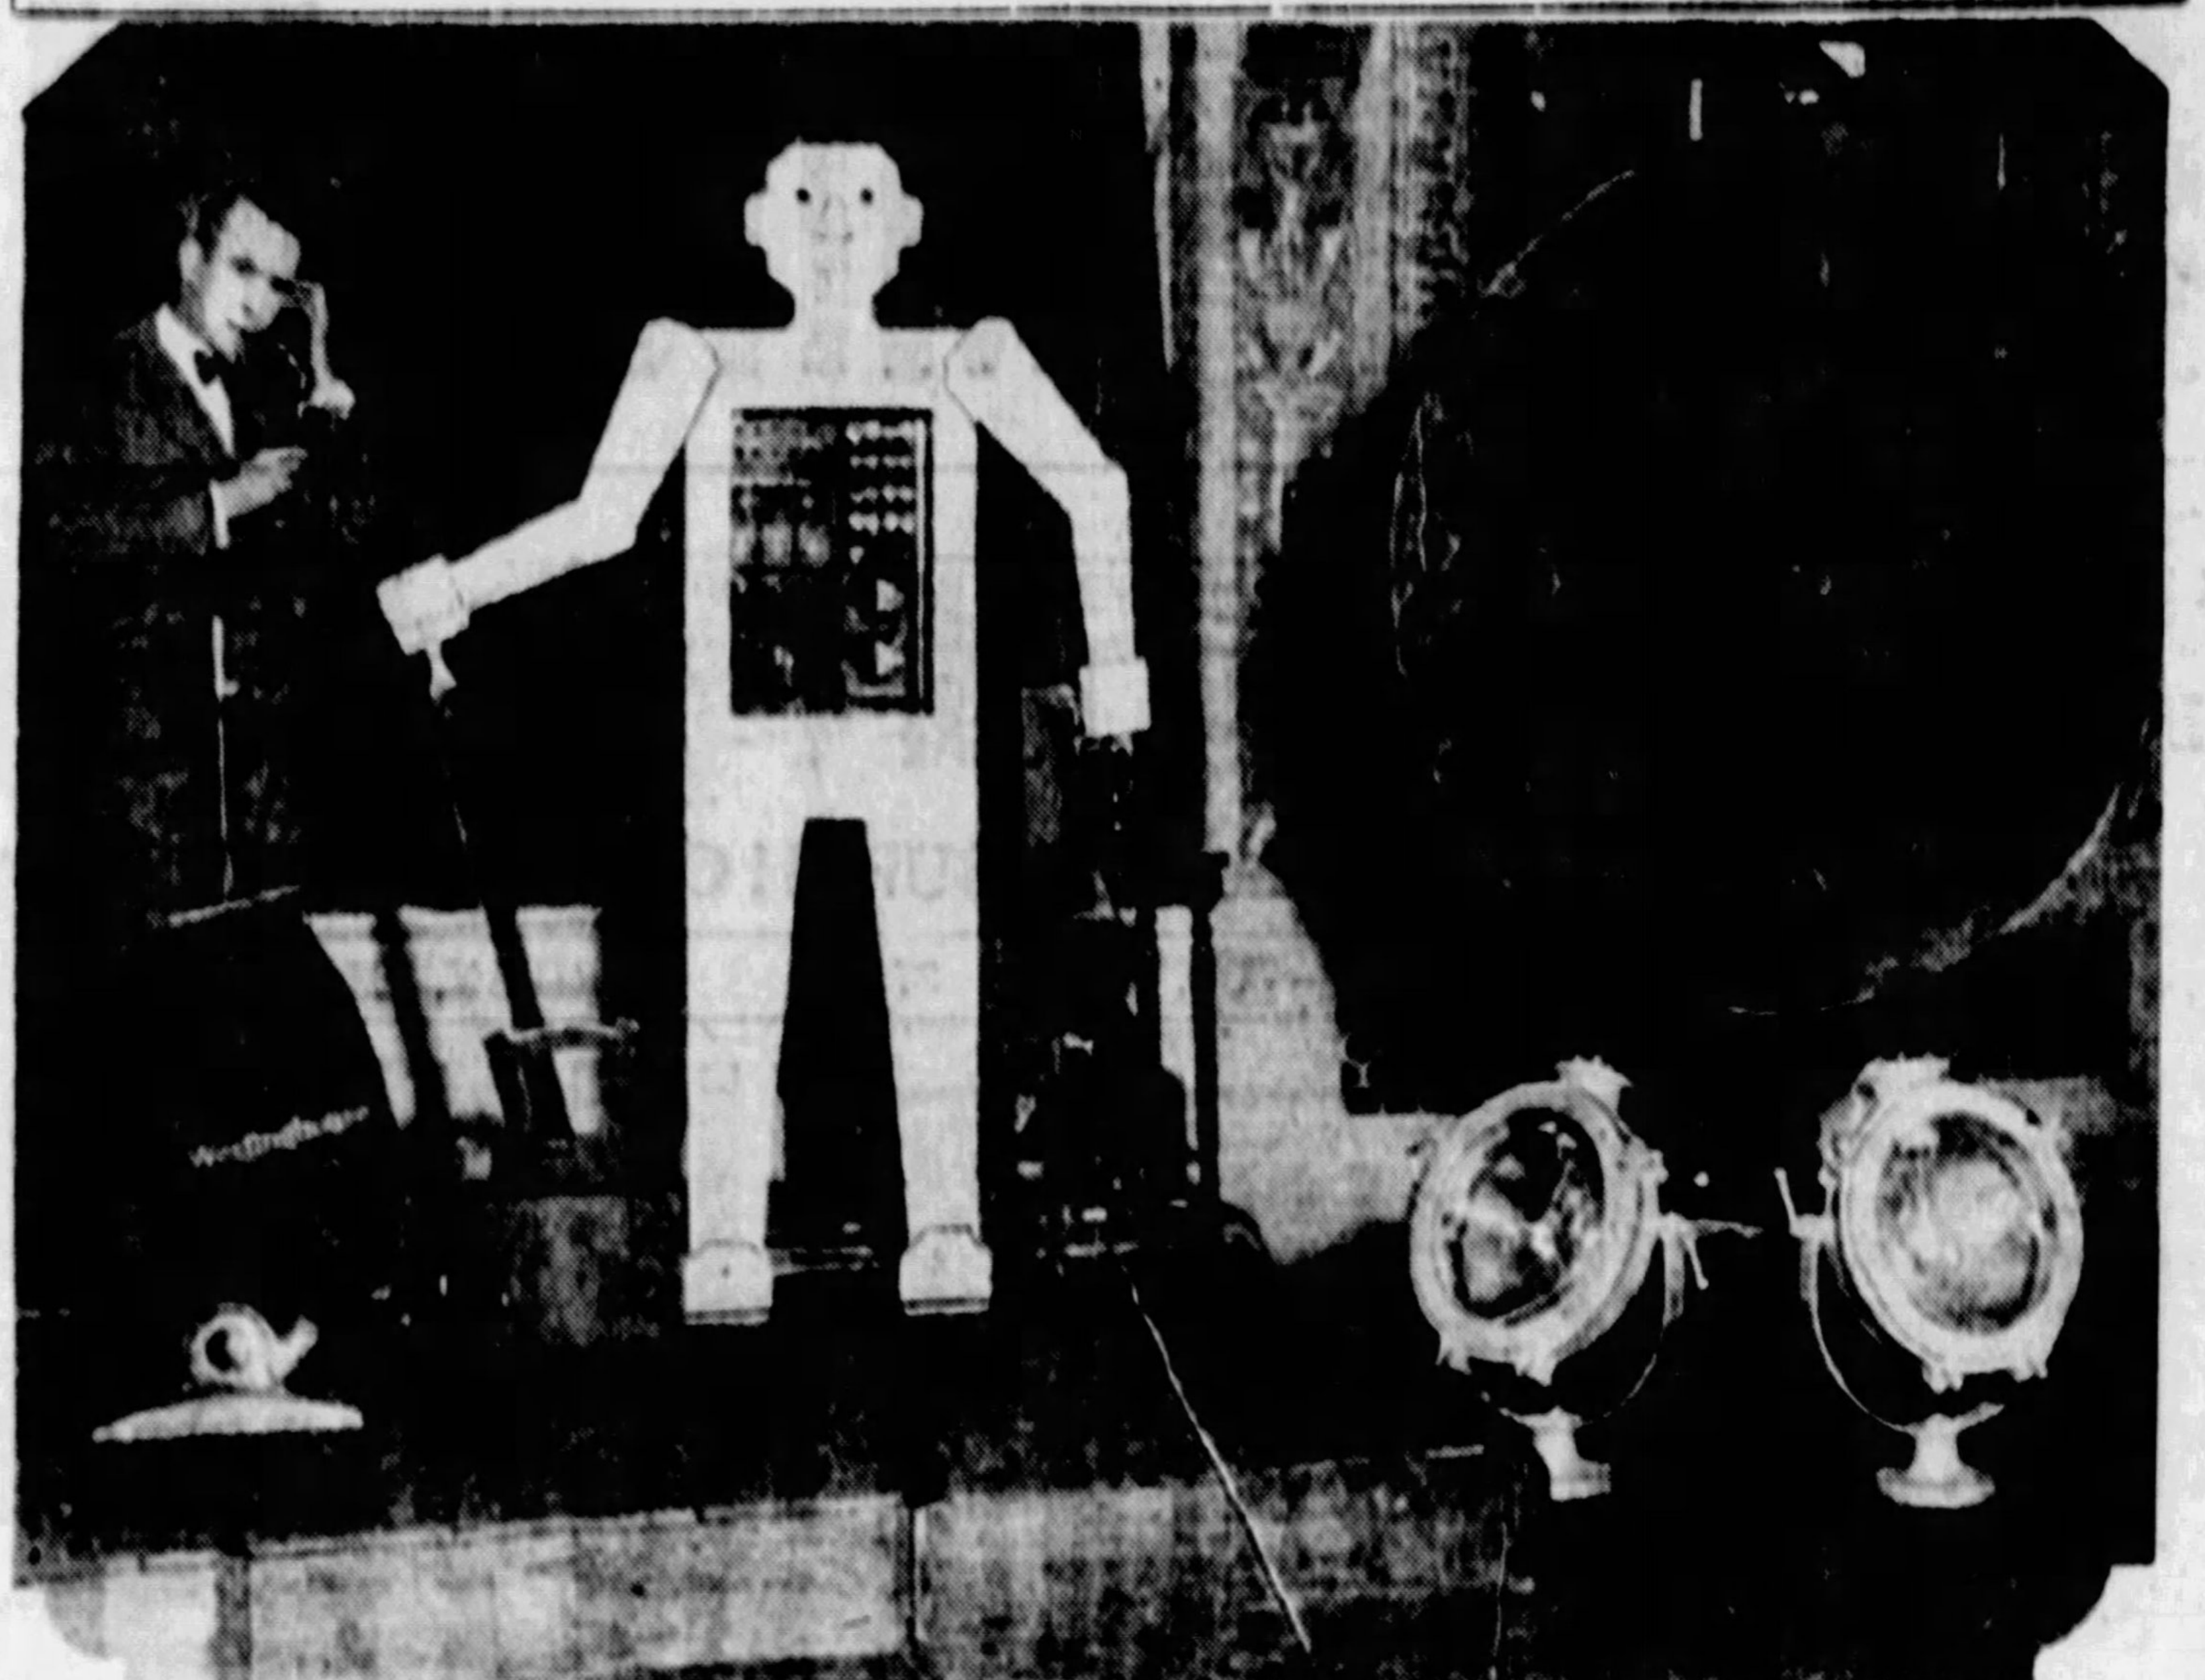
Notwithstanding Lesher's ignorance of the case, J. D. A. Morrow, the company's president, knew all about the Barr case on Tuesday. He told The Sun-Telegraph that Barr had never been discharged, despite the fact that Barr had made an affidavit to the effect that his superintendent fired him within four hours of the Senators' visit to Pricedale on February 25.

Barr was at work when the Senators called at his home, a company-owned frame house in the "patch" at Pricedale. Mrs. Barr told the committee that her husband earned $1.8? a day and she was unable to clothe her family. One of her daughters, a girl of 11, was barefoot and her mother said she was unable to attend school despite the threatened action of the truant officer.

After the Senators had gone, Barr said in his affidavit, Superintendent Charles Baughman called him into his office and discharged him because his wife "talked too much." Morrow said Baughman called the man into his office to question him about his living conditions and tried to help him.

Officials of the United Mine Workers said today they understood Barr had been re-employed after the coal company learned he had made an affidavit.

HE SOON WILL TALK



"MECHANICAL MAN" HERE

Within three months "Televox," the mechanical man created by R. J. Wensley, an engineer of the Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing Company, will be given a voice and will be able to answer the telephone in the purest of Pittsburgh English, the inventor promised. Now he demonstrates with almost human ability the business of remote control, which is now being used practically in Washington, D. C., by the War Department. At the banquet of the Traffic Club of Pittsburgh at the William Penn Hotel last night, the mechanical man operated switches, lights and a semaphore to the amazement of the many distinguished guests, doing things as ordered by Mr. Wensley over the telephone.

Blizzard Downs Stinson Plane in Record Attempt

FLIERS TO TAKE AIR AGAIN

International News Service.

DETROIT, March 9.—Wind-driven snow swirling over Lake St. Clair this morning forced Eddie Stinson and his co-pilot, George Haldeman, to abandon their attempt to beat the world's endurance record for airplanes after being in the air 18½ hours. The fliers will likely make another attempt Sunday.

Stinson and Haldeman made a safe if hazardous landing at 2:58 a. m.

Stinson and Haldeman said they had been blinded by the snow. Fearing they might get out over the open waters of Lake St. Clair, the fliers made a safe landing at Selfridge Field. The storm had put out the landing lights at the field.

When the plane took off from the lake ice it carried 548 gallons of gas and 20 gallons of oil. Under 6,031 pounds weight the ship flew steadily 200 feet up. Before midnight last night, with its gas load perceptibly lightened, it was flying at an altitude of 600 feet, with the motor running perfectly.

Stinson was attempting to beat the world record set by Edzard and Ristics last August in a Junkers monoplane. The two German fliers stayed aloft 52 hours 22 minutes 31 seconds. To better this time it would have been necessary for Stinson to have stayed in the air until 2 p. m. Saturday.

CLEANERS DECLARE TRUCE

Accused as members of a widespread ring to force dyers and cleaners into an organization to raise the price of the work, Jack Diamond, of Melwood avenue; Louis Cohen, of Callowhill street, and A. J. Roth, of Glenview place, were freed of the charges today after having been convicted in November of conspiracy.

The charges were dropped when District Attorney Samuel H. Gardner moved for a nolle prosse in Criminal Court after Visiting Judge Davis W. Henderson handed down an order granting a new trial. The motion for a nolle prosse was then granted.

Harry Friedman, of Hampton street, who with his partner in the Liberty Dyers and Cleaners, of Liberty avenue, accused the defendants of conspiring to ruin their business by intimidating their employes, throwing acid in a truck of clothes causing great damage, and sending clothes to them with chemicals concealed for the purpose of starting fires in their establishment, because they would not join the organization, explained today that a satisfactory settlement had been arrived at and that the prosecutors wished to drop the charges. The prosecutors recently filed action in Common Pleas Court claiming damages aggregating $150,000.

District Attorney Gardner, upon inquiry as to the dropping of the criminal charges, said that it would be a matter of difficulty to proceed with a new trial if the prosecutors wished to drop the charges.

C. OF C. IS SILENT

head of a special committee to take "neutral" consideration of the coal strike crisis, was given opportunity by The Sun-Telegraph to make a full explanation of the allegations made yesterday by C. E. Lesher, executive vice president of the Pittsburgh Coal Company, before the Senate investigating committee.

"The public believed that E. S. McCullough, employed to make a survey for the Chamber, was acting in good faith with all concerned and would make an unbiased report," Mr. Wallace was told, "but Lesher in his testimony swears that the coal company actually employed the man, paid his salary and used your organization of 5,000 Pittsburgh business men merely as a cat's-paw. Is that true?"

"Oh, we have nothing to say about that," answered Wallace.

"WOULDN'T LIKE TO SAY"

"Of the 5,000 or more members of the Chamber, how many besides the officers and 26 members of the board of directors knew that McCulloch was simply working for the Pittsburgh Coal Company?" Wallace was asked.

"I wouldn't like to say."

"Do you think that the rank and file of the Chamber membership would have tolerated such an arrangement if they had known it, Mr. Wallace?"

"Oh, now, I don't want to talk about this thing."

"Will you have something to say later? Will you have something to say before taking up the active duties in the new 'neutral' committee of which you are chairman?"

"No, no, no—I'm not saying anything at all."

A. V. Snell, secretary and general manager of the Chamber of Commerce, pleaded that he was "new" to Pittsburgh when the McCullough pact was put through, saying that he had only lately taken his job. He said he could not remember the details of the arrangement with the Pittsburgh Coal Company.

During 1925 the official organ of the chamber, "Pittsburgh First," devoted many pages to articles by Lesher in which he assailed the Jacksonville agreement and declared it was ruining the coal business.

Directors of the Chamber of Commerce, when the pact with the Pittsburgh Coal Company for the employment of McCullough was made in 1925, were:

Dr. John G. Bowman, Arthur E. Braun, William H. Davis, Thomas A. Dunn, Howard Heinz, W. S. Linderman, William L. Munro, J. B. Nessle, Charles H. Ogden, Lawrence E. Sands, J. B. Shea, Arthur W. Thompson, C. D. Armstrong, Norman F. Brown, J. H. Carroll, Jr., George S. Davison, T. J. Gillespie, A. L. Humphrey, Charles H. Lehmann, Harry W. Neely, James Rae, Marcus Rauh, A. B. Shepherd, Joe T. Taylor, Harry Dangerfield, William S. Diggs, George R. Dorman, Robert Garland, Morris Knowles, Gen. A. J. Logan, H. C. McEldowney, John McLeod, William H. Stevenson, Henry Tranter, George R. Wallace, E. T. Whiter.

Her mother says Thelma is traveling about with a beauty contest promoter who temptingly lured the girl with a stage career offer.

Later it was learned Hendershot had been taken to the hospital in an ambulance from a downtown business building. At Bettis Field, McKeesport, Kenneth Lovejoy, an aviator, said that he had received a long-distance telephone call from Washington last night from D. Barr Peat, manager of the field, who was reported to be with Hendershot. Lovejoy said that Peat did not say anything about Hendershot.

SLUGGER BEATS GIRL

Beaten on the head with the butt end of a revolver and left stunned in the street, Miss Elsie Hatton, 23, of 2583 Charles street, North Side, was robbed of her purse last midnight at Galveston and Beech avenues. The attacker fled with the purse which contained nothing but a few newspaper clippings.

Miss Hatton had been visiting a friend and was walking home when the attack occurred. She told police that a tall, well-dressed man, wearing glasses, a dark overcoat and cap, stepped up from back of her and struck her on the head.

The woman screamed and fell to the pavement. The thug snatched the purse from her hand and fled. A passing motorist took the girl to the Presbyterian Hospital, where she was given medical attention.

WANT COAL POLICE OFF STREET

A petition is being circulated by residents of Bethel township for presentation to Sheriff Robert H. Braun, asking that coal and iron police employed by coal companies be restrained from patroling the public highways in the township, Michael Hartneady, leader of the striking miners in the township, said yesterday. Hartneady has conferred with Sheriff Braun and District Attorney Samuel H. Gardner, but did not ask for any specific action be taken.

Hartneady, a former sheriff of Carbon county said that he and other union organizers in the district feared they could no longer prevent "real trouble" unless the activities of the private police were curbed. He charged that the police are needlessly patroling highways a mile away from company property.

TAX OFFICE IS 'ALL SET' FOR RUSH

The office of D. B. Heiner, collector of internal revenue, will be open at 8 o'clock, a half-hour earlier than usual each morning until next Thursday to care for the anticipated rush of income tax returns. The closing hour will be 5 o'clock, instead of 4:30, today and tomorrow. Monday the office will be open until 6 p. m.; Tuesday and Wednesday until 9 o'clock, and on Thursday until midnight, the last possible moment to file a return.

Returns on taxable incomes far in excess of those filed in the corresponding period of last year have been received to date at the internal revenue office. Collector Heiner said yesterday that it was noticable that the people have become educated in filing the returns, and that a great majority are being sent in by mail, easing up the jam of persons in the office that has been a regular part of the returning period in previous years.

One hundred and twenty clerks are kept busy. Yesterday it was estimated that 5,000 returns had been placed on file.

Occupation of Nicaragua Pains Will

GREENSBORO, N. C., March 9.—The Senate says the Marines were sent to Nicaragua to supervise an election, and have to stay until it's held, which is next October.

WILL ROGERS

Meantime, the Marines are doing all they can to see that there are fewer votes to supervise, and Sandino is doing all he can to see that there are fewer Marines to supervise the next time we go wet-nursing some ambitious republic's election.

Why go in so early? Go in on the day of election. We are the only nation that ever supervised anything a year before it was supposed to come off.

Yours for shorter and fewer supervisions.

ATTERBURY REFUSES COMMENT ON CHARGES

JUST SMILES, FLEES FROM QUESTIONER

Gen. W. W. Atterbury, president of the Pennsylvania Railroad, who attended the twenty-seventh annual dinner of the Traffic Club of Pittsburgh, at the William Penn Hotel last night, declined to enter into a discussion of charges made against the railroads during the Senate committee's investigation of the coal miners strike being heard in Washington.

"I am not familiar with the details of the care," Gen. Atterbury said.

"But there are serious charges made against the railroads, including the Pennsylvania, by the United Mine Workers, that they had entered into a conspiracy to depress coal prices. Are these charges true?" Gen. Atterbury was asked.

"I believe that is what they are trying to find out, isn't it?" Gen. Atterbury countered.

"Have you any expectation of attending the hearings?" he was asked.

"I have heard nothing in that regard," he replied. "Of course, if I am called, I will be quite willing to go."

"So you have nothing to say in connection with this investigation?"

"No. Our business is to buy coal to operate our railroad," the General added.

"But not at the expense of depressing prices to the point of crippling the union?" he was asked.

EVADES ANSWER

But Gen. Atterbury merely smiled an answer to this question and fled from further questions.

Probably there has never been such a distinguished group of railroad, steamship, industrial and traffic men gathered together at one time as that which attended the dinner last night. More than 1,200 of the leading men in these fields were gathered from all parts of the United States, representing practically every railroad, steamship line, class of industry and traffic group in the country. There were men from California and the most eastern points, and from North and South. Traffic managers of most of the large industrial concerns of the community were present.

W. J. Herman, president of the Traffic Club, referred to the local organization as the premiere traffic club in America with the most active and energetic membership of any similar association in the country. George A. Buse of Pittsburgh was toastmaster.

Edwin P. Morrow, former governor of Kentucky, was the first speaker, and gave an oratorical treat, drawing the kinship between Pennsylvania and Kentucky and eloquently pointing out the leadership of America as the land of liberty and opportunity.

MORROW AT PROBE

His address brought the enthusiastic crowd to its feet, but it sat back stunned when Toastmaster Buse explained that a hoax had been played. Through the inability of ex-Governor Morrow to be present, due to the Senate committee's investigation in Washington, his twin brother, Charles H. Morrow, a distinguished officer in the Regular United States Army, had volunteered to take his brother's place and make the address.

"The mechanical man" child of the inventive brain of R. J. Wensley, engineer with the Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing Company, was put through his startling performances, being controlled from a telephone on the speakers' table and actuated in its movements by sounds transmitted over the wire. The inventor insisted the only practical use of the "mechanical man" was in remote control for public utilities, such as unattended substations.

"Sir Donald McLean, journalist, author and traveler, of London," gave an amusing address on American customs and manners, but later admitted he was Walter Daniels of Boston, Mass. Will A. Davis directed the musical program, which included orchestra and choir. Rev. Alexander Gibson, pastor of the McKinley Park Presbyterian Church, spoke the invocation.

NEW SPRING COATS

23 Models

Women's—Misses' —Small Women's

Here is a specially planned event, which will cause hundreds of women and misses to decide upon their spring coats now, when they may have handsome, dressy ones at very much less than they would cost if we had purchased them in the usual way.

The coats are of the kasha-like fabrics which are so popular for spring because they are lightweight and youthful. Also, some of the women's coats are of rich silk crepe.

The coats are smart in style, and have those features which identify them, unmistakably, as new, namely: Capes, scarf collars, large fur cuffs (sometimes accompanying furless necklines), Paquin and other flattering collars of natural, ombre and butter mole, squirrel, kolinsky and monkey fur; intricate finishing details which are noted on higher-priced coats.

All may enjoy the advantages of this event, for there are misses' sizes 14 to 20, women's regular sizes 34 to 46, and small women's sizes 33½ to 45½.

pneumonia, to which he succumbed at 2:30 o'clock. At his bedside were his son, Capt. John Wanamaker, and his daughter, Mrs. Hector Munns.

All Wanamaker stores will be closed until after the funeral services which will be held at Lindenhurst, the family estate at Germantown, Pa. It is assumed that Mr. Wanamaker's business organization will be the beneficiary of a large part of his heavy personal insurance.

Wanamaker was 65 years old. He was born in Philadelphia February 13, 1863. He was graduated from Princeton University in 1886 and shortly afterward went into the mercantile business with his father.

AVIATION ENTHUSIAST

While one of the outstanding merchants in the world he was also a great aviation enthusiast. It was his dream, he declared a few years ago, that there would be aircraft travel between London and New York so that he could spend the week-end in England and be back home here for work on Monday. He backed Commander Richard E. Byrd in his successful flight over the North Pole and his recent non-stop flight from New York to France.

Through Wanamaker's generosity many historical sites and monuments in and around New York have been preserved. He was author of the idea for the "Eternal Light" memorial to the World War dead in Madison Square and was largely instrumental in gathering funds for its erection.

He was a member of the Metropolitan Museum of Art, New York, and the Sulgrave Institution, Washington. He belonged to clubs in New York, Philadelphia, Paris and elsewhere and was director in many business enterprises. At one time he was president of the American Art Association of Paris.

He was formerly consul general for Paraguay and consul for Uruguay and the Dominican Republic at Philadelphia. He was at numerous times decorated in appreciation for his benefactions and services. Great Britain made him a commander of the Royal Victoria Order; Italy named him a grand officer of the Order of the Crown; Serbia decorated him as an officer of the Order of St. Savain, and Venezuela as a member of the Order of the Liberator.

Wanamaker was married twice. His first wife was Fernanda Henry, of Philadelphia, who later died. His second wife was Violet Cruger, of Providence, R. I., and New York City.

The wealthy merchant prince was an untiring public servant. He took special interest in the New York City police department and at one time served as special deputy commissioner and president of the Board of Deputy Police Commissioners. He was a trustee of the Mutual Life Insurance Company of New York and also acted as executor for the estates of his father, John Wanamaker, and of Thomas D. Wanamaker. In 1918 he was appointed executor of the estate of James Gordon Bennett, noted editor.

One of Wanamaker's countless gifts enabled the American Scenic and Historical Society to secure a portion of the original Fort Washington, a relic of the Revolutionary War.

He was also known as a music lover. His auditorium in the Wanamaker store here was the scene of concerts of the highest order. It was his delight to acquire rare and fine old musical instruments and then have them played by artists for the benefit of the public. At one such concert the instruments were valued at $500,000.

Diogenes' Quest Ends; Honest Man Found

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., March 9.—(AP.)—A modern Diogenes would have ended his quest here today.

R. D. Duncan, manager of a local hotel, received five cents by mail, in payment for a bar of soap a guest took away from the hotel five years ago.

The accompanying letter said:

"I am sending you five cents as pay for a bar of soap I took away from your hotel five years ago. I got to studying about it and it condemned me. Please forgive me."

The letter came from a man residing in Iuka, Miss.

ONE TRIP LIKE THIS PLENTY

NEW YORK, March 9.—Charles Seilitz, 62 years old, came back to New York after rowing a boat 1,800 miles from New York to Miami. It took him four months and eight days to make the trip. During that time he engaged in 586 hours of actual rowing.

He was stranded four days in a Carolina swamp, had to break ice off Wilmington, Del., and was overturned in Chesapeake Bay.

ITALY FREE OF 'DOPE', MUSSOLINI TO KEEP IT SO

8-MILLION WOMEN TO FIGHT DRUGS

By WINIFRED BLACK

NEW YORK, March 9.—"I hope that America will organize the world conference on the serious question of opium addiction and I shall come in person to attend it in America."

WINIFRED BLACK

That is what Mussolini says in a letter received yesterday by Mrs. Sarah Graham Mulhall, former deputy commissioner of the Department of Drug Control in New York.

Mrs. Mulhall was sent by the Federation of Women's Clubs to study the work of the Opium Commission of the League of Nations and she is now planning to enroll 8,000,000 American women in the fight against "dope."

Italy does not grow narcotic plants, Italy does not manufacture narcotic drugs.

But Italy has no intention of being made a dumping ground for narcotics and Mussolini himself is determined to keep "dope" and "dope" sellers, and "dope" users out of his country.

He isn't going to wait until it is necessary to build refuges for the poor slaves of "dope."

He isn't going to have "dope" smuggled into his country and woe betide any human being who tries to sneak up an alley and sell cocaine or morphine or marijuana or heroin or codeine to any man, woman or child in Italy.

Life Term for Peddlers

Any such person as that will not be sent to prison for a month or so, or a week or so, or maybe a day or so and then turned loose to spread the hideous contagion of "dope," like leprosy in the community.

He will be sent to prison for life and nobody will find any pardoning board to let him out again on any pretext any time, anywhere, anyhow.

Italy was not invited into the advisory committee in the League of Nations sub-committee on opium.

But that didn't keep Italy out of it.

Mussolini sent Signor Cavazzoni, an exceedingly agreeable, but most plain-spoken person, to the meeting of the committee and the signor called attention to the fact that the committee as it then stood was made up of representatives of countries which were making an excellent income either in growing narcotic plants or manufacturing narcotic drugs.

Italy's Influence Felt

Cavazzoni did not say exactly that he considered the wolf rather a poor member of a committee for the protection of Little Red Riding Hood, but he didn't leave very much doubt as to what he meant when he demanded a place for his country on that Opium Commission.

And the moment Cavazzoni became a member of the commission, he made himself felt. He declared that Italy did not propose to be "drugged" and "doped" and manipulated in any way as a drugging and "doping" center.

He declared Italy definitely an aggressive part in an aggressive program for the extermination of the "dope" evil.

He didn't seem to care in the least whose toe he stepped on in the matter, and when people began to talk about "business" and "profits" and world politics, Signor Cavazonni suddenly became deaf.

If America had waked up to this "dope" evil in time, as Italy has done, we might not have to build refuges for the pitiful slaves of a devastating disease.

Two or three years ago the average American looked upon "dope" as a strange vice entirely belonging to the underworld.

The average clean-living, straight-thinking American never dreamed that "dope" was going to come anywhere near his life or his home or anyone that he loved.

Dope Creeps Into Homes

The average American has changed his mind.

He has had to change it. He has seen "dope" creeping into his own home and into the homes of his friends. He has watched the horrifying growth of youthful crime and he has finally got it into his head that "dope" is at the bottom of a great percentage of that crime.

And now he's trying to do something about it.

All over the United States people are forming clubs, joining associations and enlisting actively in the active fight against this awful evil.

Out in Seattle the White Cross Society is enlisting thousands and thousands of men and women in this war.

The Seattle Council of Churches, the Kiwanis clubs, the Rotary Club, and University Commercial Club and a half-dozen other civic organizations have telegraphed to Washington asking their representative in Congress to take a stand in this matter and to begin by voting for the Porter bill when it comes up next week.

Hundreds of people who belong to clubs, whose by-laws forbid indorsement of any issue pending before a political body are "burning up the wires" from Seattle asking support for the Porter bill.

The Seattle Elks have broken their rule against political activities and have enlisted almost to a man in the war against "dope."

Jews Join Fight

In New York the committee on co-operation of the United Synagogues of America has adopted a resolution pledging its support of the Porter narcotic bill.

United Synagogues of America has 60 synagogues in the immediate New York district and 200 synagogues throughout the country.

All these bodies are working actively for the passage of the Porter bill. And they are also interested in the Shortridge bill in the Senate, which asks for a larger appropriation for the Federal Narcotic Service work.

The New York public schools are taking up the fight and teachers from now on will be obliged by law to teach the effect of narcotics on the human system.

All through the Middle West the women's organizations have rallied to the cause and it looks now as if the Porter bill will go through with very little opposition.

That bill will be one of the three important steps in a great national and international plan to conquer the evil which is making such fearful inroads upon the youth of our country.

That bill, if it becomes a law, will take care of the poor wrecks of addicts who cannot take care of themselves.

It will protect innocent people from the "dope" infection.

It will lock up the "dope" peddler and keep him locked up.

It will lock up the "dope" smuggler and keep him locked up.

Provides for States

It will make it possible for every state in the Union to know a place where a "dope" addict can be sent for humane, kindly and scientific treatment.

And it won't cost the state one penny more than it would to send that same victim to a prison or a county jail to "suffer it out" in hideous agony—and then go out into the world, to begin the whole wretched business all over again.

The Porter bill means hope for the "dope" slave. Protection for those not already infected, and a sane, practical way of handling the problem of the crowded Federal prisons.

If that bill passes, America will have taken one long step forward in the determined fight on the "dope" traffic and "dope" slavery in this great country of ours.

ASKS AID WITH DELEGATES

WASHINGTON, March 9.—Senator George, Democrat, of Georgia, last night asked the state Democratic committee to aid him in the selection of delegates for the Houston convention.

George, who is Georgia's "Favorite Son" candidate for the presidential nomination, was authorized by the committee to select the list of delegates himself. In a letter to G. E. Maddox, chairman of the state committee, George asked him to call a meeting of the committee to advise with him on the men and women to be selected. He said: "This request is submitted not for the purpose of avoiding responsibility, but to enable me to wisely and properly exercise the power conferred upon me."

NEW TYPE CAR GETS TRIAL

WASHINGTON, Pa., March 9.—A new type of interurban car was placed in operation by the Pittsburgh Railways Company on the Washington-Pittsburgh line yesterday. The new cars have been designed by the railways company's own engineers and provide a more comfortable seating arrangement, although reducing the number of passengers that can be seated from 62 to 55.

Yesterday a party of Pittsburgh Railways Company officials brought one of the new cars to Washington on an inspection trip.

The blaze, discovered in the right wing of the main building which houses the college, threatened to assume serious proportions, but it was extinguished with college fire fighting apparatus before Latrobe firemen arrived.

MAY ABANDON 'ROCKET HOP' TO VENUS

Universal Service.

MIAMI BEACH, Fla., March 9.—Robert Condit, chemical engineer of Condit, O., who caused much comment when he built an oceanside stockade here and admitted that he intended to fly to the planet Venus, will decide today whether he will make the attempt this spring.

He admitted that he was making arrangements for fresh financial backing. He explained that the time when the meteoric stream would be favorable for his fifty million mile hop would be over in a couple of days.

He added:

"There has been a bombardment of meteors lately. One hit in Nicaragua that was a hundred yards long. I might find conditions more favorable if a waited until August."

Condit recently applied to the city council of Miami Beach for permission to charge admission to the stockade where he has assembled the skyrocket type projectile he plans to use in his inter-planetary journeys. It was denied.

He said the suggestion came from his backers, who hoped that quite a sum could be raised from satisfying the curiosity of the winter colony regarding the rocket in which, Condit says, he could make the journey to Venus and return in 40 hours.

TRINITY MOVES FOR CHARTER

Judge John A. Evans in Common Pleas Court today granted a preliminary order for a charter for Trinity Cathedral Church, of the Episcopal diocese of Pittsburgh, on petition of Bishop Alexander Mann and 20 other incorporators. April 2 was set for a final hearing. By the change, Trinity Church, Sixth avenue, a parish institution, would become the official seat of the bishop and be maintained by the diocese. Authorization of the change was given at the diocesan convention in January.

AWFUL ACHES AND PAINS ARE GONE!

Pittsburgh Man Relates How Ten Herbs Made Remarkable Change In Him.

"I am a different man today, as those awful aches and pains are gone—only occasionally do I feel a slight twinge in my arms or legs." was the statement of Mr. James Ragrut, 2416 Fifth Avenue, Pittsburgh, to the Ten Herbs Man, who is at May's Main Store, 529 Liberty Avenue, Pittsburgh, where he is daily demonstrating the great natural medicine, Ten Herbs. "Your medicine made this great change in me," continued Mr. Ragrut, who is 58 years old. "It was terrible the way I suffered with rheumatism before taking Ten Herbs. Intense aches and pains came over my whole body. They were worst in my arms and legs. Sometimes they were so bad that I could hardly get around, and finally I had to give up my job.

"Terrible pains of some kind came in my head. All this suffering, together with nervousness, let me get very little sleep. My stomach troubled me. Food formed gas, which caused bloating and awful misery. I was badly constipated, and could not find anything that would relieve me. My liver and kidneys did not work right, as I had dizzy spells, and at times would almost go blind.

"I have taken several bottles of Ten Herbs and intend to continue its use as long as I get results, for my case was a stubborn one, and I was in a terrible condition. My appetite is better, and now I can eat anything without having distress afterwards. My bowels are regular. What a glorious thing it is to sleep soundly and naturally—that is just the way I sleep since my suffering ended and my nerves became quiet. My liver and kidneys are in better condition, as biliousness and dizzy spells are gone. Ten Herbs is making such a different man of me that I do not hesitate to recommend it to the public."

The Ten Herbs Man is at May's Main Store, 529 Liberty Avenue, Pittsburgh, where he is daily meeting the public and explaining the merits of this medicine. Free sample given.

MINE TOTS FED BY BRICKLAYERS

WASHINGTON, Pa., March 9.—Three hundred hungry children of striking coal miners at Meadowlands, two miles north of here, were provided a "square meal," the first many of them had had in months, when a truckload of provisions and cooked food was sent out here by the Bricklayers' Union of East Liberty, Pittsburgh.

Fifteen sympathizers, including eight women, came with the truck and distributed the food to the families under the supervisior of the union relief committee.

52 MURDERS IN THREE YEARS

WASHINGTON, Pa., March 9.—Data furnished here by former Coroner William Greenlee, who completed a three-year term on January 1, show that 52 murders were committed in Washington in 1925, 1926, and 1927, the largest number in any similar period in the history of the county.

Not a single slayer has paid the death penalty. Although two convicted men are now under sentence of death in jail for murders committed last year. In addition to the 52, five additional murders have been perpetrated since the first of the present year.

NAB YOUTH, SAY HE HIT MOTHER

WASHINGTON, Pa., March 9.—Accusing his mother, Mrs. Louise Mounts, of taking chewing gum from his coat, Willard Mounts, aged 22, a millworker, is alleged to have savagely attacked her, knocking her down and rendering her unconscious. When arrested and arraigned before Alderman John F. Carmichael, Mounts pleaded guilty, but the magistrate deferred sentence until he could conduct an investigation. Mounts was saved by police from rough handling by neighbors.

ENJOIN UNION IN ELK COUNTY

RIDGWAY, Pa., March 9.—An injunction has been granted to the Shawmut Mining Company, of Elk county, to insure the safety of workmen going to and from the mines of that company, at Brandy Camp. Judge William Darr of Brookville, presiding judge of Jefferson county, signed the injunction, which is a temporary restraining order returnable on March 14. Non-union miners working at Brady Camp have been subject to annoyances going to and from work by members of the union now on strike, it was alleged.

BOSTON ADMINISTRATOR QUITS PROHIBITION POST

BUSINESS, CIVIC LEADERS AT BOND ISSUE PARLEY

COUNCIL GIVES OUTLINE OF PROJECTS

Pittsburgh's big business and civic organizations were represented by 200 persons joining with City Council yesterday in an open discussion of the proposed $7,248,000 peoples' bond issue, to be voted on at the April 24 primaries.

Explaining the meeting President of Council James F. Malone declared that it was to present the bond issue plan to the people and to point out why some major improvements had been omitted.

"This is Council's proposal, and the Mayor's, too," said Malone. "Its approval will mean that the city will be financially able to meet the demands of our citizens for the paving of unimproved streets, repaving of present worn-out roads, extension of water lines, playground improvements, the laying of sidewalks and sewers and many other essential projects."

Malone said also that one of the principal reasons for submitting the issue to the people was to protect the narrow borrowing margin of Council, now less than $2,000,000.

Councilman P. J. McArdle said the issue was to meet the ordinary small projects as advanced by "Mr. Average Citizen." He said it would take care of scores of "neighborhood improvements" that have been neglected in other issues for big projects.

Councilman Robert Garland brought in the employment question, and said that an issue at this time would work a double economic advantage in providing long-needed improvements and at the same time creating a demand for labor and materials.

Mrs. Q. W. Hershey, representing the League of Women Voters, said that her organization was in favor of the pay-as-you-go system. Almost a score of others spoke.

NEW CHEMICAL PLANT TO GIVE WORK TO 500

AWAIT MUSSOLINI OK. ON PROPOSED TOWER

NEW YORK, March 9.—The construction of a skyscraper here that will serve as an Italian center is awaiting the approval of Mussolini, it was revealed today. The plans for the huge building, to be known as Mussolini Tower, have been sent to Italy. The structure would house the Italian consulate general, Italian Chamber of Commerce, Italian motion picture theater and art exhibitions and halls for meetings.

SOUTHERN COAL OPERATORS TO BRING SUIT

WASHINGTON, March 9—(AP.)—Coal mine operators from southern territory, meeting here today, voted to institute litigation in the Federal Courts against the latest decision of the Interstate Commerce Commission in the lake cargo rate controversy.

Most of the principal operators in bituminous coal located south of the Ohio River were represented in the session, over which James D. Francis, chairman of the committee of southern operators, presided. In addition the principal southern coal carrying railroads, the Chesapeake and Ohio, Norfolk and Western and Louisville and Nashville railroads were represented, although the question of whether the railroads will participate in the operators' appeal to the courts was left open.

Attorneys for the southern mine operators, headed by J. V. Norman, of Louisville, who have conducted the prolonged controversy before the Commerce Commission over the coal rates, advised their clients at the conference that there was good ground for appeal with a prospect of success.

The exact form of the appeal is still to be determined by the legal staff, but it was said that action had to be instituted before a federal district judge before March 18.

Every determination was evidenced to keep alive the prolonged contest over the lake cargo rates, which in recent years has extended to bring in congressional partisanship and political reaction. The most prominent of the indirect results has been the recent Senate fight over the confirmation of John J. Esch as a member of the Interstate Commerce Commission.

The fight in the courts will be against the ruling of the commission in refusing the Chesapeake and Ohio, Norfolk and Western and Louisville and Nashville railroads the right to make a voluntary reduction of 20 cents per ton on lake cargo coal moving from mines south of the Ohio and Potomac rivers to the Great Lakes for transshipment by boat to the northwest.

E. PITTSBURGH GIRL LOSES DAMAGE SUIT

A verdict in favor of the defendant was returned in Common Pleas Court today in the damage suit filed by Olga Limperos, of East Pittsburgh, against Victor Steiner, also of East Pittsburgh, for injuries she received when struck by an automobile driven by him. The defense alleged that the woman stepped in front of the machine and claimed that the driver in no way was at fault.

NIP HEFLIN'S CHARGE OF HEARST TAX REFUND

MELLON DENIES INSINUATIONS TO SENATE

Universal Service.

WASHINGTON, March 9.—Frequent charges in the Senate by Senator Heflin (Dem.) of Alabama that large tax refunds have been granted William Randolph Hearst, the publisher, in recent years, were definitely exploded by Secretary of the Treasury Mellon yesterday.

In a letter to Senator Smoot (Rep.) of Utah, which the latter read to the Senate, Mellon pointed out that no tax refunds have been made to Mr. Hearst since he became secretary and that he so informed Heflin several weeks ago.

Heflin not only ignored this letter from Secretary Mellon, but renewed his charges on the floor of the Senate several weeks later. Referring to this in his letter to Smoot, Secretary Mellon said:

"It occurs to me that you may wish to correct any impression that the erroneous statements by Senator Heflin may have left in the minds of his colleagues and have the record show the true facts."

Confronted with this evidence, Heflin explained that his secretary had failed to call Mellon's letter to his attention, although it was addressed to him on January 16.

"There are two or three thousand letters in my office," said Heflin, "which I have not had a chance to read as yet. It may be Secretary Mellon's letter is among them."

Secretary Mellon's letter to Senator Smoot follows in full:

"Under date of January 11, 1928, Senator Heflin addressed a communication to me in which he inquired what amounts of taxes, if any, had been refunded to William Randolph Hearst since I had become Secretary of the Treasury.

"On January 16, 1928, I addressed the following communication to Senator Heflin:

"'In your letter of January 11, you inquire what amounts of taxes, if any, have been refunded to William Randolph Hearst since I became Secretary of the Treasury.

"'You are advised that no refunds of taxes have been made to Mr. Hearst during that period.'

"It appears appropriate to bring this to your attention in view of the remarks of Senator Heflin appearing on page 3,444 of the Congressional Record of February 21, 1928, as follows:

"'The corporations in the main seem to be the ones who are to get it. I notice a refund is provided to the Washington News of over $300,000, and this is a presidential year. I do not know that there is any connection whatever between the two. There are other newspapers which have had refunds in this presidential year involving thousands and tens of thousands of dollars. I understand Mr. Hearst had a refund of $600,000 or $700,000 in the last two or three years, and that he and Mr. Mellon have become exceedingly warm friends.'

"It is perhaps of interest to you to know that the Washington News, to which Senator Heflin probably refers, received no refund from the Treasury Department. It is probable that the Senator has ben misinformed concerning the case. Certainly in view of the letter addressed to the Senator on January 16, there is no basis for the statements made on February 21 in respect to the alleged refund to Mr. Hearst.

"It occurs to me that you may wish to correct any impression that the erroneous statements by Senator Heflin may have left in the minds of his colleagues and have the record show the true facts. Sincerely yours,

"ANDREW W. MELLON,
"Secretary of the Treasury."

DENIES SHE'LL WED TUNNEY

TAMPA, Fla., March 9.—(AP.)—Miss Caroline Bishop, motion picture actress and dancer from Beverly Hills, Cal., has made a flat denial of reports that she is engaged to Gene Tunney, world heavyweight champion.

"Mr. Tunney and I are the best of friends, but that is all," the blonde actress said. "We are not engaged."

We Still Must Aid Pullman Co. Pay Porters

WASHINGTON, March 9.—(AP.)—Tips to sleeping car porters are still legal.

The Interstate Commerce Commission today dismissed a complaint of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters against the Pullman Company, which sought to end the practice of having sleeping car attendants take a portion of their wage in the gratuities of the traveling public.

The petition which the Commission turned down sought an order against the Pullman Company which would have at least hampered the continuance of the tipping custom.

The decision said:

"Tipping in the Pullman service was practiced long before the Congress began to regulate interstate carriers and it is reasonable to assume that if Congress intended the practice of either giving or receiving tips to be unlawful, it would have so declared in express terms."

ARE YOU a "TOXIC"

60 at 40

Nothing is more tragic than to be old before your time. Yet thousands of men and women are branded as "old" in the prime of life simply as a result of a state of health. Living at the pace we do today we put too great a strain upon our vital organs, especially the liver. The liver becoming "limp" or sluggish, fails to cleanse the blood of the poisons formed in food waste. Then a toxic condition of the whole system with heart and blood vessels affected and premature old age. The liver occasionally needs a little help and there's nothing better for this, as doctors agree, than ox gall. Ox gall is a remarkable natural stimulant for the human liver, promoting its normal active functioning. Dioxol tablets are genuine ox gall in dainty and tasteless form, each tablet representing 10 drops of pure ox gall. To be sure of getting the genuine ox gall, be sure of getting Dioxol. They cost less than 2c each at good druggists, and a few make a wonderful difference.

The organization went on record as co-operating with the health department and recommends that the Sunday schools suspend classes at least for March 12. Dr. James R. Smith, city health officer, was present at the session.

STEAMER SINKS AFTER CRASH

NEW ORLEANS, March 9.—(AP.)—The Munson liner Hermis sank in the Mississippi River, 32 miles below New Orleans, early today after a collision with the Norwegian steamer Modemi, according to reports reaching the Munson Line offices here.

The Munson offices reported all members of the crew of their ship were taken aboard the Modemi, which, badly damaged, is being towed to New Orleans.

The collision occurred during a dense fog.

The Modemi, under command of Capt. R. Norsom, was outbound with general cargo. She is of 4,367 tons gross. The Hermis was inbound with a cargo of sisal from Yucatan.

BOYS DROWNED BY FATHER BURIED

Universal Service.

INDIANA HARBOR, Ind., March 9.—Bobby Chisholm, who is 7, solemnly dropped a white carnation into each of the graves of his brothers, as they were buried here yesterday.

He was the only mourner among all the thousands who attended the funeral of the two boys, Edgar and George, who died because of childhood's complete faith in a father.

George Allen Chisholm, the father, sobbed his grief in his cell at the Crown Point jail. He has been indicted for the slaying of the boys. He has confessed pushing them into the ship canal here.

The funeral was made possible through the charity of undertakers, ministers and the friendliness of neighbors.

The burial service of the Episcopal Church was read by the Rev. W. Edward Hoffenberger. The Rev. B. P. Nesbit of the Methodist Episcopal Church preached the sermon.

Then Bobby stood very straight between the two caskets as the lids were clamped down, looking first at one body and then at the other.

Then at the grave the Rev. Walter Howard Moore of the Congregationalist Church said a prayer.

And Bobby stepped between the graves, dropping first one carnation, then the other.

ACQUIT MAN IN MILL ROBBERY

Ralph J. Maloney, 30, 113 East Eighteenth street, Homestead, was acquitted of robbery and felonious assault and battery by a jury yesterday in Criminal Court before Visiting Judge Charles M. Culver of Bradford. He was accused of assaulting Vincent Pikutis while operating a traveling crane 50 feet in the air in the Homestead Steel works, October 27, last, and robbing him of $64.

Defense Counsel Ralph Silverman showed by mill records that Maloney was not at work that day, being at home, and that the victim had not identified him. A previous trial of the charges resulted in a disagreement by the jury February 24.

MAN RETURNED TO MAYVIEW

Taken into custody in Alaska after having been at liberty for almost a year following his escape from Mayview, Lawrence Pefferman, was again lodged in that institution yesterday after having been returned here Wednesday night. A deputy sheriff returned Pefferman from Skagway, Alaska to Portland, Ore., by airplane. From Oregon Pefferman was brought to Pittsburgh by Dr. W. A. Anderson of Portland. Pefferman was located in Alaska a month ago but the frozen rivers and blocked highways made it impossible to take him to Portland. The opportunity to charter a plane was offered and the captor decided to transport him in that manner.

THE PITTSBURGH SUN-TELEGRAPH

What Happens to D'Artagnan In Years Between Two Dumas Novels to Be Depicted in Film

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS,

Motion Picture Editor of Universal Service.

LOS ANGELES, March 9.

THE rough places in the United Artists' grass have been allowed to grow for almost a week. Douglas Fairbanks has been too busy looking at a print of "Three Musketeers" to tear up the ground with his golf clubs.

He is all enthused over Dumas' "Three Musketeers" and is talking of D'Artagnan's virtues to anyone who cares to listen. Hist—there is a reason. His next picture will be a sequel to "Three Musketeers."

"Twenty Years Later," Alexandre Dumas' sequel, has been discarded, but an original story, based on D'Artagnan's [illegible] adventures, will be substituted. Mr. Fairbanks feels there is too much lapse of time between the two novels. His story also will tell what happens in the meantime.

Sam Taylor, who directed John Barrymore in "Tempest," will do the megaphone honors for Doug.

Good luck seems to attend anyone Charlie Chaplin casts in his pictures. Perhaps, because he is discerning and knows enough to select winners. There is Betty Morrissey, slim, grey-eyed child who played a small part in "The Circus." Betty has been placed under a five-year contract by Louis B. Mayer to appear in Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer productions, a very good start for a girl still in her teens. Her first M-G-M picture is "The Deadline," the film that will introduce "Flash," the dog wonder, to his motion picture public. D. Ross Lederman, who will direct "Flash," has already taken some tests of Betty and I am told they are exceedingly promising.

The entire picture colony is talking of Robert Florey's daring in making a picture that cost $97. This expressionistic feat is called "The [illegible]—A Rhapsody of Hollywood" and is the story of two extras who commit suicide. I hope, after all the extravagant tales of the high cost of movies, you are wondering how Mr. Florey was able to economize so rigidly. The story told to me is that his [illegible] an interest in the picture in lieu of salary, that he used the pasteboard the laundry sends home with men's shirts to build miniature sets, and his kitchen was his studio. His picture has been booked by the United Artists theaters and with this encouragement he is already started on another which he will call 'Sadness.' He promises that this one will only cost $80.

Rod La Rocque was a mighty good stage actor before he chose to become a shadow hero. There has always been a hankering to return to the footlights and try his voice again. And now it seems that the golden opportunity is near. He has a chance to appear on the stage in a modern satirical tragedy, written by a European playwright, and has accepted, providing he can arrange his picture engagements. Being a wise young man, Rod feels that after he plays in a stage production it should have value as a movie.

New 'Abie' Drama Scheduled for Broadway

Anne Nichols' "Abie's Irish Rose" has left Broadway but the memory of its six-year run will be perpetuated through a sequel play, it has just been announced in Hollywood by William de Lignemare, general manager. He has completed negotiations with Oliver P. Bailey, lessee of the Republic Theater, which sheltered the original for the opening of "Abie's" successor within three months. The entire original cast of "Abie's Irish Rose" has been retained for the sequel play. The action in the continuation occurs two years later. Miss Nichols is now supervising filming of the original play at the Paramount studios and is to leave for New York soon. The new play will not be named until after rehearsals begin.

Zeppelin to Have Part in New Air Film

A giant Zeppelin, exact duplicate of one of the German dirigibles flown during the World War, has been purchased by Howard Hughes, president of the Caddo Company, for use in the aerial fighting scenes of "Hell's Angels." The big balloon figures prominently in the overhead action of "Hell's Angels," heralded as one of the most expensive photoplays ever filmed.

The dirigible will be flown over Los Angeles and vicinity and six planes, equipped with two cameras each, will film the performance. The Zeppelin will be shown on the screen in the act of dropping bombs on London, the British city being reproduced at a location site near Encino, Cal.

MUSICAL PLAYS ABOUND

John Hundley, who plays Jack Warren in "Just Fancy," Joseph Santley's musical comedy production, which will be the attraction in the Alvin all next week, is the son of H. Rhodes Hundley, dean of Denison University, Granville, O.

The Pitt will house "The Optimists," New York and London revue, next week. In the company are George Hassell, Josie Heater, Flora LeBreton, Rolans Bottemley, Emma Kligge and others.

Among the entertainers coming to the Nixon next week with Ray Dooley in "Sidewalks of New York" are Smith and Dale, Fiske O'Hara, Elizabeth Murray, Linda, Ruby Keeler, Dick Keene, Josephine Sabel, Calm and Gale, Harvey Fagan and Will and Gladys Ahern.

Coram, ventriloquist of England, will apepar in the Davis next week with his little dummy, Jerry. Not usual ventriloquial act but a little comedy is their offering.

George C. Tyler evidently finds revivals and all-star casts profitable. In addition to his all-star company playing "Diplomacy" in the Nixon, Mr. Tyler has another company playing "She Stoops to Conquer." Mr. Tyler has telegraphed to Harry Brown, manager of the Nixon, that the Wednesday matinee of "She Stoops to Conquer" in Philadelphia drew into the box office $4,464, the largest amount ever played to at a matinee by any Tyler company in his 35 years of management.

PHILHARMONIC HERE FOR CONCERT TONIGHT

Toscanini, Italian conductor from LaScala, Milan, will lead the New York Philharmonic Orchestra tonight and tomorrow afternoon in Syria Mosque. Toscanini has not visited Pittsburgh since he brought his LaScala Orchestra to this city seven years ago for one concert. Tonight the major work on the program will be Beethoven's "Pastorale" Symphony, and Saturday afternoon the Symphony will be Haydn's No. 13. Other numbers tonight include Rossini's Overture to "The Barber of Seville," Debussy's "La Mer" and excerpts from "La Pisanella," by Pizzetti. The matinee will include in addition to the Symphony, Ravel's "Daphnis and Chloe," "Juventus," by De Sabata, and Wagner's Prelude and Finale from "Tristan and Isolde." These concerts mark the close of the present season of symphony concerts under the auspices of the Pittsburgh Orchestra Association.

PGH. COAL KEPT FAITH WITH MINERS---WARDEN

INSISTS WAGE PACT IS NOT BROKEN

posed the breaking of the agreement, indorsed Warden's course, he said.

The Pittsburg Coal Company chairman did not admit for one moment, however, that the company broke, repudiated or abrogated a contract. Whenever a question in regard to the matter took such a form he instantly denied that the company had failed to keep faith. All that he would admit was that the company, before the time set for the expiration of the compact, decided to go on an open shop basis and reduce its miners' wages. Don Rose, the company's attorney, told him, he said, before he laid the matter before the board of directors, that he had a legal right to take that course.

Herriman Recalled

F. E. Herriman, president of the Clearfield Bituminous Coal Corporation, concluded his testimony before the committee with the statement that while he approved of collective bargaining with the workers, what his company had been "up against" in its dealings with the United Mine Workers had been "collective dictation." Herriman said he would like to deal with his own employes without interference by union officials from elsewhere.

In a discussion of methods of paying coal and iron police Senator Wheeler told Herriman:

"A lot of things are done in Pennsylvania that are not done in other states. They seem to have a country of their own."

Eaton grilled Herriman about coal lands which the Clearfield corporation leases to other coal companies. Herriman said the revenues derived from the leases were excluded from consideration in computing the cost of production. A discussion of the company's accounting methods followed. Long tables of figures were introduced into the record.

The testimony veered to a meeting of central Pennsylvania operators at Altoona on March 1, 1927. Herriman said he attempted at the meeting to bring about a continuance of good relations between the operators and the union. John L. Lewis, president of the United Mine Workers, misunderstood the purpose of the meeting, Herriman asserted.

Disclaims Plot

Eaton asked many questions concerning meetings of railroad officials, railroad purchasing agents and coal operators at which, Eaton suggested, the matter of reducing miners' wages, with a view to cutting the price of coal was discussed. Herriman disclaimed all knowledge of any such meetings. Eaton asked how many deputy sheriffs the Clearfield Bituminous Coal Corporation employed. The company has 45 or 46 now, as against 71 at one time, Herriman answered.

Eaton pointed out that the cost price of producing coal, as represented by the company's selling price to the New York Central Railroad, rose from $2.12 a ton in 1926 to $2.33 in 1927. Eaton then asked if the increase represented the cost to the company of its deputy sheriffs.

Herriman said the increase was partly due to the fact that two of its mines were idle during the period in question and "cost goes up as tonnage goes down."

Hits Group Dictation

In concluding his testimony Herriman said he favored "collective bargaining," but objected to "collective dictation"—"and that's what we have been up against for many years."

Herriman further stated that his company paid its men a living wage and felt it ought to have the right to deal with its own men without interference by union officials from the outside.

"You believe in organized labor, don't you?" asked Senator Wheeler.

"Generally speaking, yes."

"Haven't conditions of the workers been improved and the hours of the workday reduced through efforts of organized labor?"

"I am not prepared to say."

Herriman evaded other questions of the same purport.

Warden Testifies

William G. Warden, chairman of the Pittsburgh Coal Company, was called to the stand at 11:03 a. m. and sworn. Eaton examined him.

He said he succeeded R. B. Mellon as chairman in 1925. Warden had been a director for eight years before becoming chairman.

"Have you had any experience on the practical side of coal mining?"

"On the practical side, no."

Warden said the Pittsburgh Coal Company had 115,000 acres of coal and and in that respect he believed it to be the largest in the country. The company up until 1925, Warden said, employed union labor.

It was adduced through Eaton's questions that Warden in 1925 came to the conclusion that the company's labor policy would have to undergo revision. He talked to John L. Lewis about it and in the end of April, 1925, laid the matter before the board of directors.

MINE DEPUTY IS PAID TO 'PUNCH MEN LIKE CATTLE'

WASHINGTON, March 9.—While C. E. Lesher, executive vice president of the Pittsburgh Coal Company, was testifying about the company's coal and iron police and their methods, Senator Burton K. Wheeler read a letter sent by J. H. Dunlap, a deputy sheriff employed by the Rainey Coal and Coke Company, to A. J. Green, a Kansas friend. Dunlap said he was being paid $140 a month and that his work consisted in "punching men with a thirty-eight like you punch cattle out west."

"You have to be hard-boiled to hold the job," he added.

"Did they all subscribe to this policy?" asked Senator Wheeler.

"Yes," said Warden. "It was unanimous."

"When did you decide to abrogate the Jacksonville agreement?"

"We didn't abrogate it."

"The President of the United States thinks you did."

"We have another opinion."

"Well, what happened at the April meeting to which you referred?"

"I told the board we were losing money and it was advisable to close our mines. In 1924 we lost money in mining coal, but we had other means of taking care of that—docks in the Northwest, and revenues from other companies—so that our consolidated statement for that year did not show a loss."

Warden then proceeded to tell of the closing of the mines.

"At that time," asked Senator Robert F. Wagner, "you hadn't decided to abandon the Jacksonville scale?"

"Practically so, but we had not announced it," said Warden.

"When did you decide to abandon the Jacksonville wage scale contract?"

"In May or June, we decided to go on an open shop basis under the 1917 scale so-called, because the United Mine Workers refused to arbitrate with us."

"Did the directors vote on it?"

"Yes, a vote was taken, and the directors voted unanimously to go on an open shop basis."

"How did R. B. Mellon vote?"

"The vote was unanimous."

"Was John A. Donaldson, the vice president of your company who signed the Jacksonville agreement, consulted about it?"

"Yes. He was not in harmony with my policy, and so he left the company."

Senator Wheeler asked if Director Augustus K. Oliver voted to go on an open shop basis. Warden said he believed that Oliver was present and agreed to the policy that Warden proposed.

Senator James Couzens, of Michigan, asked Warden if before going on an open shop basis and paying a lower scale of wages than provided for in the Jacksonville agreement the directors of the Pittsburgh Coal Company had legal advice on their right to do so.

Warden answered that the company's attorney, Don Rose, said in an oral opinion, that the company had a legal right to take the course proposed.

"At that time," said Eaton, "your surplus was about $80,000,000?"

"About that," said Warden.

"And the book value of your common stock was about $300 a share?"

"I can't say as to that. The market value was about $50 for the common and about $85 for the preferred stock."

Corroborates Lesher

Eaton then questioned Warden about the company's collaboration with the Chamber of Commerce in the employment of E. S. McCullough to attack the United Mine Workers. Warden corroborated what C. E. Lesher, executive vice president of the Pittsburgh Coal Company, said about the matter yesterday.

"Did you approve of that?"

"Yes," said Warden, "much to my regret."

Senator Gooding asked Warden how the Chamber of Commerce came to take an active interest in the affairs of the Pittsburgh Coal Company. Warden answered that one of the purposes of a Chamber of Commerce was to help enterprises in a city where it operated.

Eaton then asked Warden if he knew anything of the matter referred to in the following bulletin issued by the National Coal Association.

"Excerpts from bulletin No. 778 of National Coal Association, issued Saturday, March 3, 1928.

"Southern Building,

FIRE DESTROYS POWER HOUSE AT DUBOIS MINE

PUMPS HALTED, PIT MENACED BY FLOOD

DUBOIS, Pa., March 3.—Fire of undetermined origin early this morning destroyed the power house of the Northwestern Mining and Exchange Company at its Eriton shaft, three miles south of this city, totaling a loss estimated by officials to be between $40,000 and $45,000. The building was modernly equipped, the destruction including the electric booster station, motor generating sets and hoisting departments. Firemen were left without water when the flames reached the motor generators, causing the pumps to cease functioning.

The big tipple, within a few feet of the power house, was saved with chemicals. Cessation of pumps also allowed the shaft to begin to flood. One steel cage dropped 200 feet to the bottom of the shaft.

Officials are rushing temporary arrangements to provide electric power for operating the pumps in order to stop the flooding of the shaft. The shaft normally employs 400 men but had been idle six months.

SAYS HIS COMPANY KEPT FAITH

all operators whom he and his associates interviewed in connection with the preparation of the report. He said that the operators had co-operated fully in supplying information concerning conditions in the western district of Pennsylvania and that before the report was issued, tenative drafts would be sent to interested operators so that they might have the opportunity to point out to the council any errors. It is understood that the council is desirous of getting this report before the public while the industry is under the Congressional spotlight. The report is prepared by the council at the instance of the Organization of Protestant Churches of Pittsburgh."

Warden said he knew nothing whatever about the matter. He said the Pittsburgh Coal Company was not a member of the National Coal Association.

Mellon R. R. Director

Eaton asked Warden if R. B. Mellon was not a director of the Pennsylvania Railroad. Warden said he was.

Eaton then questioned the coal company chairman in regard to the employment of Capt. J. G. Searsch to organize the company's coal and iron police. Warden admitted that Searsch came from the Pennsylvania Railroad and that correspondence in regard to the matter passed between the coal company and the railroad.

The question next turned to the eviction of the Pittsburgh Coal Company's strikers from the company houses.

Eaton asked about Lick Run, where the company's houses, vacant and boarded up, stand on one side of a street and the strikers' barracks on the other side.

Warden said the company's houses were unoccupied because the United Mine Workers had leased the land over which it was necessary to pass to enter the houses.

This was the matter under discussion when the noon recess was taken.

Bare Plot Details

Yesterday's session revealed the expenditure of many thousands of dollars by the Pittsburgh Coal Company on plots designed to trick and destroy the United Mine Workers' organization.

It was revealed through C. E. Lesher, executive vice president, that the Pittsburgh Coal Company virtually subsidizes the National Labor Tribune, a paper edited by Joseph Vitchestain, and which, while pretending to be an organ of the workers, takes the side of the employers in disputes.

It was shown that the Pittsburgh Coal Company was behind the campaign conducted by the Chamber of Commerce against the United Mine Workers in 1925 and paid the salary of E. S. McCullough, the chamber's so-called "Industrial Aide."

Operators Financed Union

It was revealed that the Pittsburgh Coal Company financed the Federated Miners' Union, a mushroom organization which the company sought to use as a tool with which to drive the United Mine Workers out of the Pittsburgh district.

Senator Burton K. Wheeler, of Montana, asked Lesher if the Pittsburgh Coal Company had not encouraged radical labor organizations and spread radical propaganda, and even gone so far as to have its own Pinkerton detectives become leaders in radical organizations, in the hope of using them to crush the United Mine Workers. But Lesher denied all knowledge of such activities.

Lesher was questioned at length by Oliver K. Eaton, counsel for District No. 5 of the United Mine Workers, concerning crimes committed in the Pittsburgh Coal Company's camps by strike-breakers and coal and iron police since the strike began.

Quiz on Camp Vice

"Don't you know," said Eaton, "that according to the coroner's reports there were 15 murders in your camps among the strike-breakers in 1927?"

"I haven't seen the reports," answered Lesher.

"Who would know about these murders?"

"C. D. Eberle, head of our coal and iron police."

"Who is Jim Kosky?"

"Captain of our coal and iron police."

"Do you know that Kosky gave out a typewritten order not to arrest any employe of the company for carrying liquor?"

"No, I don't know about it."

Eaton asked many questions about specific crimes committed by coal and iron police and strike-breakers, and Lesher answered that he knew nothing about them.

"Have the higher officers of your company," asked Eaton, "taken any steps to learn anything about moral conditions at your camps?"

"Yes. We don't want any immorality."

"Was the case of the farmer's wife at Imperial, who was attacked by one of your strike-breakers at Cliff mine considered by the company?"

"The proper officers of the company did everything possible to secure his conviction."

"Don't you know that the use of liquor is a highly dangerous thing in a mining community?"

"I don't know why you differentiate between a mining community and any other community," said Lesher, resentfully. "It is dangerous anywhere."

"Do you know of your coal and iron police ever turning a liquor case over to the Federal or state authorities?"

Lesher knew of no such case.

"As a result of your importation of Negroes from other sections, who you say constitute about 40 per cent of your strike-breakers," asked Eaton, "have you taken any interest in conditions in your camps in the matter of the intermingling of the races?"

Black and White.

"We have Mr. McDowell, our personal manager, to look after that," said Lesher.

"Don't you know that in your camps dances are given at which blacks and whites dance with each other?"

"I never heard of it. They are not required to do so."

Lesher professed ignorance also as to the Negro strike-breakers living with women to whom they were not married.

Eaton then took up the Pittsburgh Coal Company's advertisement last week in which it said its cutters were getting $250 a month and its loaders $150 and asked from what statistics the company derived its figures.

"They were taken from all the payrolls for all the men for the calendar year 1927," was the answer.

In response to a question by Senator Wheeler, Lesher said the company would not object to the committee's sending an accountant to check up on the figures.

"Does your advertisement mean," asked Senator James E. Watson of Indiana, chairman of the committee, "that those did, or would have received those wages had they worked?"

"They did receive them."

"What was the object of your advertisements?" asked Watson.

"Our customers and friends wanted to know why we remained silent in the face of charges."

"Didn't the Pittsburgh papers offer to give you space?" asked Senator Wheeler.

"Yes, after the advertisements appeared."

"Not Refused Space."

"Did you attempt previously to set forth your case in the newspapers and meet with their refusal to grant you the space?"

"We did not seek publicity."

"Did you ever try to get a statement into the Pittsburgh papers and have them refuse to publish it?"

"In 1925 we sent out some statements and some were not printed."

"Were they refused?"

"Oh, no. They were not refused."

"Have the papers ever refused to publish anything for you?"

"No, we have never asked for anything."

"Why, then, do you say in your advertisement that the papers are unfair?"

Attacks C. of C.

The matter of the collaboration between the Pittsburgh Coal Company and the Chamber of Commerce in the campaign against the United Mine Workers was next taken up. Lesher said the coal company paid the Chamber $18,000 "as a subscription," and that the Chamber paid E. S. McCullough $1,000 a month for his work in trying to disrupt the United Mine Workers in the Pittsburgh district.

"McCullough, operating as the Pittsburgh Chamber of Commerce, rendered his reports directly to William G. Warden, chairman of the Pittsburgh Coal Company, did he not?" Lesher was asked.

"You will have to ask Mr. Warden about that."

Lesher expressed the opinion that the money spent on McCullough and in other efforts to influence public sentiment had been thrown away.

"What did McCullough do?" was asked.

"I often wondered about that myself. He was a corker. For one thing he helped organize the Union I told you about."

It was brought out that while the Pittsburgh Coal Company paid the Chamber of Commerce $18,000 the Chamber paid McCullough only $12,000, and Senator Wheeler suggested that the Chamber probably operated on the same plan as the Westmoreland county sheriff, who was paid $7.50 a day by a coal company for each deputy sheriff under him, but turned over only $5 a day to each deputy.

C. of C. Probe.

"This Pittsburgh Chamber of Commerce," said Attorney Eaton, "is now organizing a new 'neutral' investigation of the coal strike."

"I'm afraid they are," said Lesher.

"Are you paying the expenses?"

"No, we are paying out no more money for that kind of thing."

"You have quit that?"

"Yes."

"Did you not know in your heart," Lesher was next asked, "that this Jacksonville agreement was a binding contract?"

"No, I didn't."

"Didn't you tell Lowell M. Limpus of the New York Daily Mirror last September that you had to sacrifice the ethical to the economic?"

Lesher said he had no remembrance of having made such a statement.

Lesher was good-natured under the grilling, and the dry answers he made to some of the questions caused laughter.

Herriman Called

The next witness called, F. E. Herriman of New York, president of the Clearfield Bituminous Coal Corporation, was suave and urbane.

He spoke of the strikers as "our United Mine Worker friends," and in almost everything he said showed a placating attitude.

Herriman said his company considered the Jacksonville agreement a legally and morally binding contract, and not only did not abrogate it, but continued to operate under it for three months after its expiration. He asserted that his company desired to continue collective bargaining with the United Mine Workers, and if competition had permitted would have been glad to operate with union labor and pay the union scale. Herriman read a prepared statement reviewing the company's relations with the United Mine Workers.

The Clearfield Bituminous Coal Corporation is a subsidiary of the New York Central Railroad and turns all of its output over to that road for use as locomotive fuel.

"The New York Central," said Senator Wheeler, "did not find it necessary to cut its miners' wages to operate its roads profitably. Have not practically all of the big Eastern roads been making money in recent years?"

"I assume from reading the papers," said Herriman, "that they have."

"Did the officers of the New York Central tell you to reduce wages at your mines?"

"No, sir."

"Did they tell you to reduce the cost of producing coal at your mines?"

"The New York Central never told me to do this. I took the responsibility upon myself. I felt it was desirable to go along with our friends, the commercial operators. But we did not want to de-unionize our mines, and we feel that it was our United Mine Worker friends who were responsible."

"It wasn't because the New York Central wanted you to reduce the cost of producing that you went on an ununion basis?" inquired Senator Wheeler.

"No, sir."

ADMIT ALTOONA BANK HOLDUP

ALTOONA, Pa., March 9.—(AP.)—City and county officers today said they had obtained confessions from the three young men held in connection with the robbery of a branch of the First National Bank of Altoona. According to the authorities the prisoners, Gordon James Tuttle, and Clarence and Howard Franell, of Juniata, will plead guilty when arraigned.

The confessions, police said, showed that Tuttle and Clarence Franell entered the branch bank, locked the teller in a vault and escaped with $5,000. The loot is hidden, the police quoted the men as saying.

SAY RADIOED SIGNATURE NOT VALID

HARRISBURG, March 99.—The radio signature of Ralph Beaver Strassburger, sent from London, is only a facsimile and as such does not comply with the state election law regarding the filing of petitions by candidates, William A. Schnader, special deputy attorney general, told the Dauphin County Court today.

Schnader made the statement while arguing against the granting of a writ of mandamus which would force Charles Johnson, secretary of the commonwealth, to accept the Strassburger petition and place the name of the Morristown publisher on the Republican ballot as a candidate for delegate-at-large to the national convention.

U. S. INCREASES FOREST AREA

WASHINGTON.—The area of the national forests was increased during the last fiscal year by 41,214 acres net, according to the United States forest service. With the separation of the Ocala National Forest, formerly a division of the Florida National Forest, as a distinct unit by a recent proclamation of the President, there are now 160 national forests in the country, located in 32 states, Alaska and Porto Rico. The total net gain in national forest area was not so large last year as in the several preceding years, dut partly to the fact that a considerable acreage was transferred by special acts of Congress to national parks. Net reductions in area were shown in Alaska, California, Colorado, Nevada, New York and South Dakota. The largest increase was in Pennsylvania, amounting to 65,274 acres. Washington was second with 63,084 acres, and Wyoming third with 42,494.

JUDGE COHEN ILL AT HOME

Judge Josiah Cohen, 87, oldest active jurist in Pennsylvania, is convalescing at his home, 805 Maryland avenue, from an attack of laryngitis. The judge said today that only the annoyance of the throat affection kept him from his place on the bench, as otherwise he is "feeling fine."

HOME IN SANDY CREEK TWP. YIELDS OLD PAPERS

MERCER, Pa., March 9.—While exploring an abandoned house in Sandy Creek township, Harold Patterson found a soap box full of old papers belonging to James Montgomery, pioneer resident of the township, who was a lieutenant-colonel in the War of 1812, a member of the Constitutional Convention of Pennsylvania and of the first Legislature. Patterson has the papers.

NEW METAL SEEN AS RIVAL TO ALUMINUM

A new metal called beryllium may soon be a close rival to aluminum. Extracted from ores previously dumped away as waste, beryllium promises special value in making kitchen utensils, frames for airships, and pistons for motor cars. It is about a third lighter than aluminum, yet much harder, with four times its elasticity.

BOBBER WANTED

Florence Mondale hadn't sat in a barber's chair for a long time because family finances are rather low since her father has been on strike at Renton. Benny Penort, of East Pittsburgh, one of the seven barbers who visited the mining camp yesterday, found plenty to do.

NO TIPS IN THIS SHOP

W. Gravelle is a barber in East Pittsburgh. His father and a brother are on strike at Renton. Gravelle visited his father at the Renton barracks last week and his professional pride suffered. "Father you and your people out here need their hair cut!" he declared. He rounded up six other to give up their "afternoon off" yesterday and gave the community a trimming free of charge.

THIS IS TONY

Tony Shadoffsky had sported a glorious mustache for many moons. "Let me cut it off," urged R. P. Hassler, one of the visting barbers. "Sure, fix me up!" agreed Tony. And he did. You'll have to take the photographer's word for this. He swears it is the same man.

Why We Behave Like Human Beings

by George A. Dorsey, Ph.D., LL.D.

Life Is Prolonged But Death Cannot Be Fooled

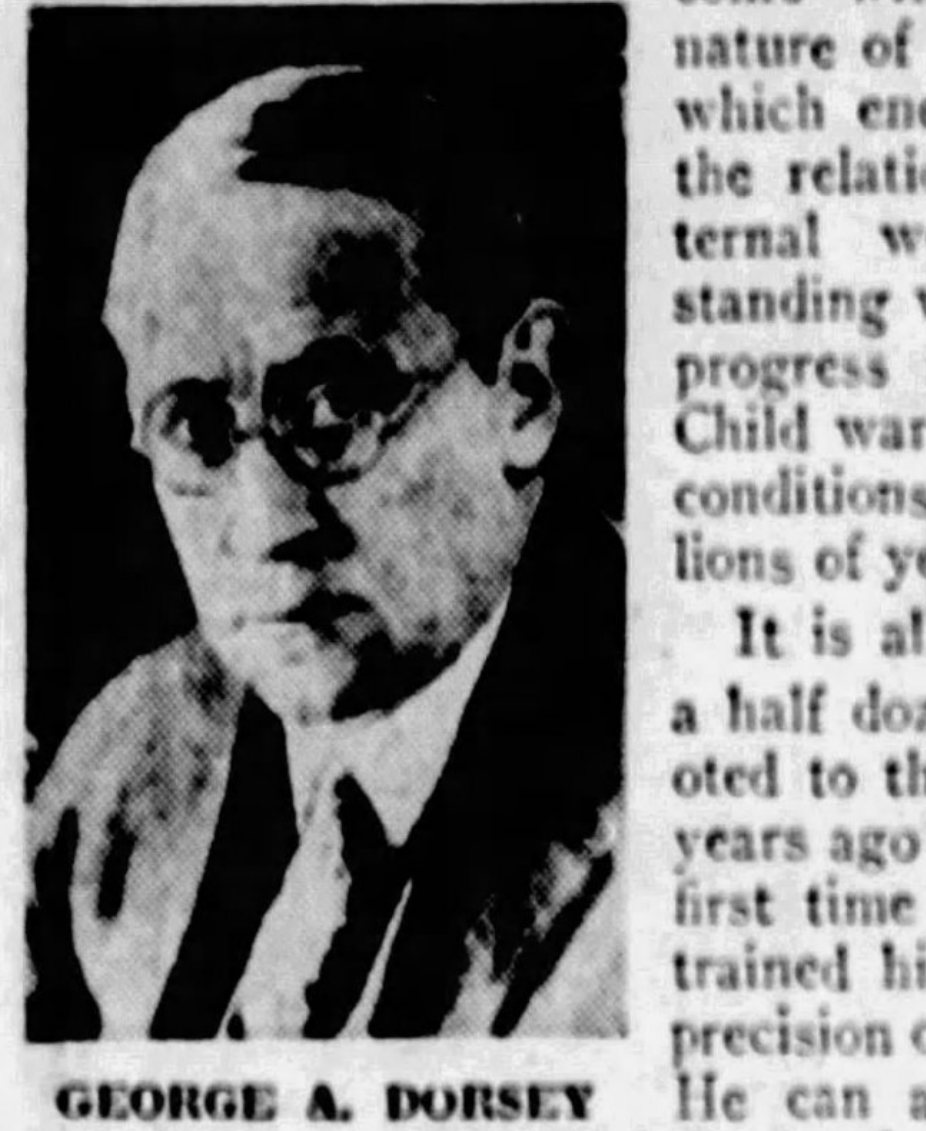
Half a Dozen Sciences Studying Life—All New Work; Health Officers' Uncertain Part

It has been discovered that the duration of life is an inherited character, Dr. Dorsey told Sun-Telegraph readers yesterday. The children of the aged are the best life risks. Yet it is the pace that kills, since lazy or sluggish people live longest. Ninety-five per cent of all living to 35 have tuberculosis; it is active in one in ten.

Humans Always Under Heavy Fire

CHAPTER XXVII.

THERE is every reason to believe that we may look forward to a greatly increased control over evolutionary processes. Why not? Think of the already enormously increased ability to control growth in living organisms. This control has only come with an understanding of the nature of the stuff of organisms in which energy is transformed, and of the relation of organisms to the external world. With wider understanding will come wider control. But progress must be slow, because, as Child warns us, we deal with internal conditions which are the result of millions of years of alternating change.



GEORGE A. DORSEY

It is all so new. There are today a half dozen flourishing sciences devoted to the study of life where a few years ago there was not one. For the first time in human history man has trained his new-found instruments of precision on newly conceived problems. He can at last ask questions about himself and about life in general. Direct questioning has replaced vague and childish speculation. Problems have been formulated and solved. And every problem solved has opened wider vistas—and more problems. But no problem was ever solved by propaganda. Nor is disease checked by mere optimism — though digestion can be checked by a bill collector and a mouse's heartbeat increased from 175 to 600 per minute by a mouse trap.

Longer Life Now

The death rate is declining; it has been declining for centuries. Men born today can expect longer life than men born twenty-fifty-five hundred, or five thousand years ago. Why this is so is not at all well understood. The decline in death rate in modern times is as true of "backward" countries as it is of Germany, England, the United States. The drop is also as true of the non-preventable diseases as of those which are supposed to be subject to control.

The part that health officers, etc., play in this decline is uncertain. War has been increasingly waged against tuberculosis for nearly a century; the tuberculosis rate has dropped less than that for diphtheria, croup, typhoid and dysentery.

The cause of many diseases is yet unknown, of others only partially surmised. Man responds to his environment, as does all life; but he is changing his environment, in places at an extraordinarily rapid rate. What is the result or what will be the result of these changes is not yet known, nor can it be predicted with any degree of certainty.

We hand public health, as we do government, over to a power which we expect thereafter to run of its own accord. But neither ever gets very far ahead of the load it is supposed to carry. Meanwhile, for every one that knows what to eat and why, there are a hundred who eat for their tongue's sake and let it go at that, not knowing that a double chin may be a misdemeanor or that arteries and nerves may be as easily choked in fat as a cat with butter. Many use their body as a clothes horse and are only concerned with the parts that show.

Startling facts come from physiological laboratories. They force us to revise our conceptions of life and death, of youth and old age. All protoplasm is potentially immortal. Man is protoplasm. Hence, . . . But man is highly complex protoplasm—an organism of infinite complexity, of tissues and organs and systems greatly differentiated, some more, some less. This mass of protoplasm functions, lives, because these parts work together for a common end. They are marvelously balanced. Upset the balance; disease; if the balance cannot be restored, the machine is broken. A few minor parts may be restored; a few may be dispensed with. The machine breaks when a vital part breaks. It never runs again.

Isolate the liver or one brain cell and study it a lifetime; liver as function and cell as behavior are as meaningless and as lifeless as a last year's bird nest. The parts of the human body are meaningless in and by themselves. Put some cells in a glass jar and watch them grow. Where does this land us? Those cells are immortal—in "proper medium."

Each of the billions of cells in the human body must also be kept in proper medium. Those cells themselves are the medium. On their own shoulders rests the burden of keeping that medium proper; they and they alone can right the machine, they and they alone know the levers. If they cannot reverse, there comes a crash. The machine is broken.

Nothing yet has come from the laboratory to give us hope that the crash is not inevitable. All vital processes are reversible; they must be. To live is to keep making compensations; changes, backward and forward. Simple organisms have it in themselves to make these compensations; they have their dynamic equilibrium in their own hands, as it were.

A Limit Fixed

Man does not: it is the price he pays for hands. Hands wear out. Even brain cells. We cannot grow new hands or new brains. They grow up together, though of different heritage; the brain being far more ancient, hence more enduring. They live together: a pin-prick on the finger may be the death of the brain.

The break may come from within, or from without, or from any one of a vast number of causes. Three out, all out. So in the game of life. The number of our outs—or innings—is set in our inheritance and buried from sight in the complex mechanism which is ours for a while. We can burn it up or jolly it along. But beyond a certain point there seems to come a limit to its mileage. The machine wears out because it is that kind of a machine. It dies because sooner or later the Marksman of Death strikes a vital spot.

Pearson in his Chances of Death pictures a bridge of life across which is a trickle of humanity. They are under the fire of the five marksmen, one for each age. They fire with different weapons, speeds and degrees of precision. The first marksman concentrates a deadly fire upon infancy—before as well as after birth; "beating down young lives with the bones of their ancestors." The second marksman aims a machine-gun at childhood; his fire is concentrated, the loss is less appalling. The third shoots at youth with a bow and arrow; there is no great loss. The fourth fires slowly at maturity with a blunderbuss; his hits are scattered. The fifth marksman of death is a sharpshooter; no one can escape the death of senility.

VULTURE DROPS TWO U. S. FLIERS

International News Service

MANAGUA, Nicaragua, March 9.—The bodies of two Marine Corps aviators, who met death when a huge vulture of the Nicaraguan jungles struck their plane as they were attempting to land at the aviation field at Esteli, causing it to crash to the ground, awaited shipment here today for burial in the United States.

The victims were Capt. William C. Byrd and Sergt. Rudolph A. Frankforter. Investigation of the strange accident revealed that the huge buzzard struck one of the struts of the plane, causing its left wing to collapse.

The plane was within 200 feet of the ground when the wing collapsed. Both men jumped, but the accident occurred too close to the ground for their parachutes to open and save them.

Byrd leaves his widow, who lives at Orangeburg, S. C. Frankforter leaves a widow and three children, who live in Quantico, Va.

Frankforter was acting as an observer in the fatal flight. He was a senior sergeant of marine aviation. Byrd was a veteran of the World War and had commanded the legation guard here until two years ago. He had seen much service in Haiti and Santo Domingo. Both men had exemplary records.

Vultures have given aviators much trouble recently in this region. Several planes have encountered them. But this was the first time they caused a fatal accident.

Philadelphia to Scrap Butler "Reforms"

PHILADELPHIA, March 9.—(AP.)—All vestiges of the regime of Brig. Gen. Smedley D. Butler as Director of Public Safety here are to disappear in a drastic shakeup of the police bureau, effective Sunday midnight.

The new orders re-establish all the police stations closed by Butler upon assuming office here four years ago, affecting approximately 4,000 of the total personnel of 4,400 on the force and in general abolish all the Butler "reforms." There will be 43 police districts in place of the present 28 and the district boundary lines once more will be identical with the ward boundaries.

Harry Davis, the present Public Safety Director, denied the changes were prompted by any desire to give the political ward leaders a greater opportunity to control the police.

The rear wheel and frame of his motorcycle were crushed, but the front wheel was intact, indicating that he had been struck from the rear.

TONG CIVIL WAR AVERTED

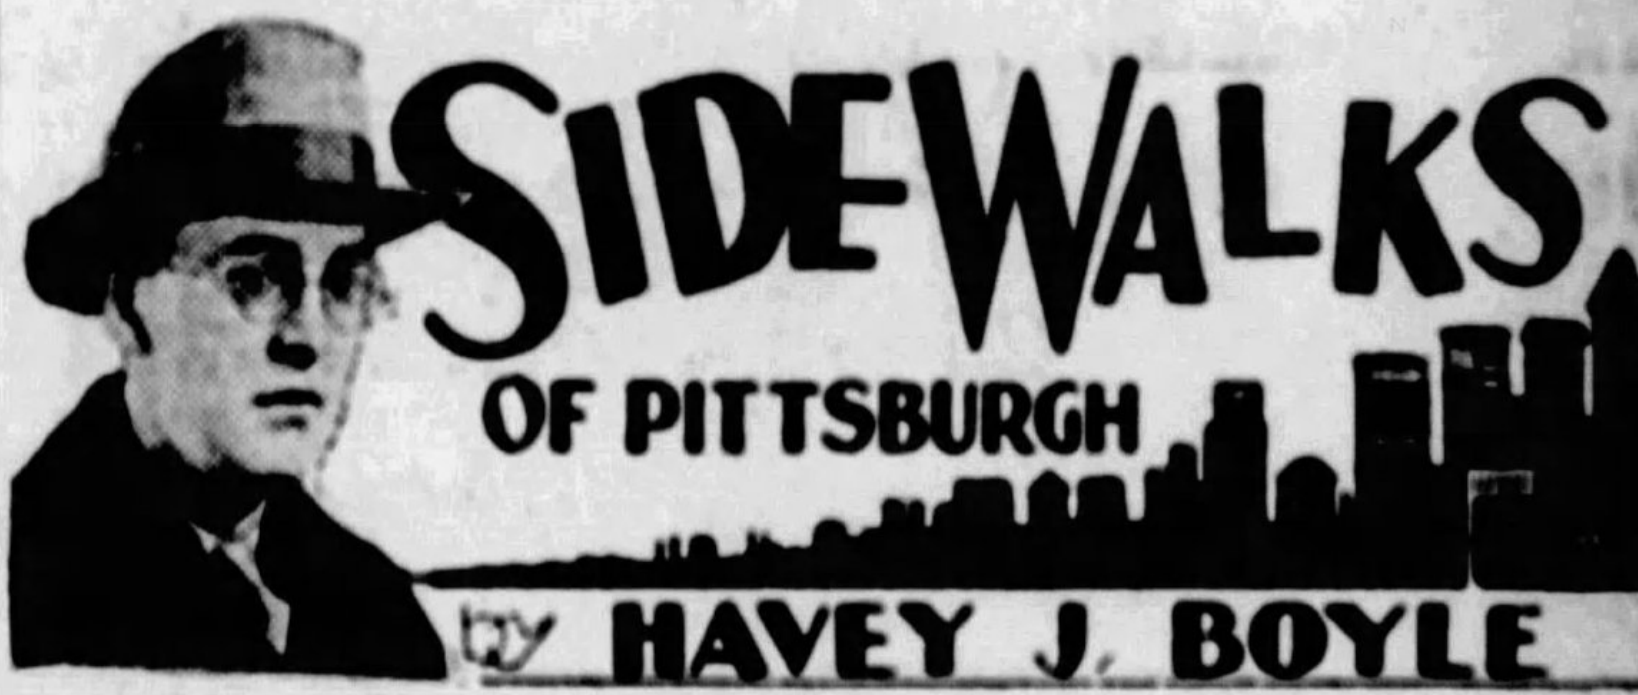
The danger of a civil war between the leaders of the Hip Sing Tong of Pittsburgh has been averted temporarily by a settlement arranged by Wing Bowe, 50, who was sent here from the national headquarters of the Tong in Chicago. The expected trouble was responsible for a special detail of police being on duty in Chinatown here for the last three days.

Now Lindy May Accept Foreign Decorations

Universal Service.

WASHINGTON, March 9.—Col. Charles A. Lindbergh may now accept all the foreign decoration that have been showered on him in tribute to his flight to Paris.

President Coolidge yesterday signed a bill authorizing him to do so. As a reserve officer of the United States Army he was not allowed to accept any foreign decoration without an act of Congress.



SIDEWALKS OF PITTSBURGH

by HAVEY J. BOYLE

IT WAS a coincidence that three railroad men who travel regularly the sidewalks of Pittsburgh were met up with in one day. Jack Doyle, of the Baltimore and Ohio, and F. B. Lowe and John Roberts, of the Pennsylvania system.

MR. DOYLE was making ready to leave for Atlanta that night. That sounds far more ominious than it really is. Jack's railroad was taking a carload of federal prisoners to the prison in Atlanta.

"Government prisoners," says Jack, "somehow have a higher tone about them than ordinary prisoners locked up in the local jail or penitentiary. They, as a rule, take their bad luck philosophically. On the way down there are always a few card games started and, unless one knew them, one would hardly suspect they are on their way to serve lengthy sentences in a bastile.

MUST BE ONE OF THOSE GOVERNMENT PRISONERS

"Some of them, apparently, are beyond reformation. For instance, the last time I made the trip with the prisoners I noted one card player quite blandly hiding away a spade after each hand. At last he came up with a nice spade flush which he had compiled in his lap. One of the other fellows had been watching closely and when Mr. A came up with his spade flush, illicitly achieved, Mr. B said: 'I was just wondering what you planned to do with all those spades. I got two kings and this is one time that two kings beat a spade flush.' And there was no argument."

THE prisoners, Jack says, are manacled as they get on the train, but because the United States deputy marshals are both alert and humane, the prisoners are freed from the manacles after they get on the train. The usual Pullman curtains are dispensed with on the berths of the prisoners—the better for the marshals who sit up all night on guard to see that no one tries a daring escape.

* * *

MR. LOWE and Mr. Roberts, of the Pennsylvania system, reported that the annual pilgrimage of Pittsburghers to the shrine of race-horse enthusiasts—Louisville on the date of the Kentucky Derby—is going to be bigger this year than in any recent year. They said that Jim Routley, over in the County Commissioners' office, will be the guide this year again and whereas only one train, albeit a long one, was operated out of Pittsburgh for the Derby enthusiasts last year, two trains will be necessary this year.

THE Derby special, by the way, attracts an interesting crowd. Last year there were, for instance, more than one couple of high social standing who went on the Derby special. There is something about horse-racing, of course, that attracts all shades of society.

THERE is a daring woman around town who tries a dubious racket. She has a list of drinking booths slightly beyond the pale of the law and these she visits regularly to exact a tax for her silence. The usual fee is $10, but of late she has been visiting the places a little too often, spies report, and just the other night she was told to do her worst. In her tone is a thinly-veiled hint that if she is not taken care of she will tell the authorities all about the city's iniquities.

THE majesty of the courts never seems so thrilling as when a tipstaff is escorting a jury across a downtown street. Traffic comes to a dead stop while the permanent and temporary officers of the court file across the street to a lunch-room. In case you get in a fever of excitement about this, stand at Diamond and Grant streets around noon some day and see old John Law assert himself. Some day there is liable to be an awful mixup—on that day, say, when the jury, the mail truck and the fire trucks all decide to move across an intersection at one and the same time. We're betting on the fire truck.

Appetizing Menu for Sunday Dinner

By PRUDENCE PENNY

WHAT a great help it is for the busy housewife who has cudgeled her brain all week, thinking up meals that will hit every palate, to find a tasty menu for the Sunday dinner all prepared for her.

Try the following Sunday dinner menu and let me know how the others of your family like my suggestions:

Anchoy and Cress Canapes
Roast Chicken
Duchess Potatoes Green Peas
Molded Tomato Salad
Lemon Cream Pie

For the canapes, toast rounds of bread and spread with a mixture of anchovy paste and butter. Lay sprigs of water cress, marinated with French dressing (with the salt omitted), on the anchovy mixture and sprinkle bits of pimento over this.

PREPARING THE CHICKEN—Singe and thoroughly clean a 4½-pound roasting chicken, sprinkle inside and out with salt and stuff with the following dressing:

Two coups soft bread crumbs, one-half cup butter, one cup boiling water; salt, pepper and poultry seasoning to taste.

Melt the butter in the water and pour it over the seasoned bread crumbs. Sew each vent carefully and roast the chicken in a hot oven for about an hour and a half. Or if you have an electric fireless cooker preheat it for 20 minutes, place the chicken to cook and after an hour turn off the heat. A half hour on retained heat will complete the cooking of the chicken.

RICED POTATOES—To prepare the potatoes put hot boiled potatoes through the ricer. Add melted butter, pepper and salt and two well-beaten eggs. Pile into a buttered baking dish and brown in a hot oven.

For the salad use one can of tomatoes, one teaspoon of salt, one teaspoon powdered sugar, two teaspoons gelatin, one-half cup cold water.

Soften the gelatin in the cold water. Heat, strain and season the tomatoes and add the gelatin. Chill in small cup molds and serve whole on leaves of lettuce, garnished with mayonnaise.

LEMON CREAM PIE—Line a pie tin with crust and bake. While it is baking cook the following in a double boiler: The juice and grated rind of two lemons, one and one-half cups of sugar, two tablespoons cornstarch, a few grains of salt, three egg yolks, two cups water, one tablespoon butter. When this has cooked until nicely thickened pour into the baked pie shell and heap lightly with a meringue made of the stiffly beaten whites of the three eggs and two tablespoons of confectioner's sugar. Set into a slow oven to brown the meringue. If the oven is too hot the meringue will fall and be watery.

Here's another dessert from a proved recipe:

BUTTER SCOTCH PIE—For the crust us 1 cup flour, ½-cup shortening, ¼ cup ice water and ½ teaspoon salt.

Sift the salt and the flour, and work in the shortening with a silver knife. Some good cooks prefer to do this with the tips of the fingers. When the shortening is evenly mixed, add the water a little at a time. The ¼ cup is a tentative amount, because you'll find a great difference in flour. Some flours take up more liquid than others. You'll have to use your judgment about the amount of water to add to make the dough easily handled.

Toss the dough on a slightly floured board and roll very thin. Line a pie tin, being careful to get all the air out from between crust and tin, and thus avoid blisters in the baking. Many good cooks cut a strip of pie dough and place it around the edge of the pie, thus giving extra protection for the mixture that is to be filled in. This extra edge should be pinched to the edge of the tin, with fingers or fork, and the crust then baked in a moderate oven until evenly browned.

MAKING THE FILLING—While it is baking, make the filling. For this you'll need 1 cup of milk, 1 cup of brown sugar, ¼ cut butter, 2 tablespoons of flour, 3 egg yolks and 1 teaspoon of vanilla.

Scald the milk. Beat the eggs well and mix with the flour and brown sugar. Add the scalded milk gradually to the egg mixture and butter, and return to the double boiler. Cook until thick.

Pour into the pie shell, which is baked by this time, and top with a meringue made from the well beaten whites of the three eggs and 3 tablespoons of powdered sugar. Place in the oven, which should be moderately hot, until the meringue is brown.

SAVES MANY STEPS—I've discovered something that saves many steps and prepares hot dishes well. It's the electric grill. You can serve luncheon from the breakfast nook. I put everything on the table and make good use of the duplex kitchen outlets, using one for the grill, and the other to boil water for tea or to heat milk for chocolate. Once I sit down, I don't have to rise again during the meal. I want to give you one of my favorite electric grill luncheon menus.

PORK CROQUETTES, PEAS, COOKIES AND CHOCOLATE—The pork croquettes are made from left-over roast pork. This is put through the meat chopper or the electric kitchen aid twice, together with potatoes amounting to about one-fourth of the total amount of meat. This is seasoned with salt, pepper and paprika to taste and, last, one tablespoon of finely chopped parsley is added. To moisten it I use one egg.

When it is thoroughly mixed and smooth the croquettes are made and dipped in flour and are fried at once or put in the refrigerator until needed. About 15 minutes before luncheon the electric grill is started heating and the shallow frying pan is generously buttered and when hot the croquettes are placed in it to fry. It should not take longer than 10 minutes to brown the croquettes on all sides and heat them through. Usually this is done on top of the grill while the peas are heating in the deep pan in the compartment under the heating element. I serve rye bread with this luncheon because it more readily absorbs the richness of the pork.

The chocolate is made by mixing a teaspoonful of chocolate in each cup and pouring the hot milk from the electric kettle into it and later sweetening to taste. This is really an excellent way to make chocolate, for each person may have it as strong or as weak as he desires.

CARE OF INVALIDS—Feeding the invalid is no easy "job" for the housewife, but if the tray is attractively set and the food looks dainty and appetizing, invalids are not always irritable. The food should look appetizing and be nutritious and easy to digest. Here are a few recipes that invalids will find delicious:

EGG LEMONADE—One egg, two tablespoons lemon juice, two tablespoons sugar, one-half cup cold water.

Beat the egg until yoke and white are well mixed. Add sugar, lemon juice and water. Stir until smooth and well mixed. Strain into glass and serve.

POT POURRI SALAD — One orange, half a canned peach, two tablespoons finely cut celery, two marshmallows, one lettuce leaf.

Cut the orange in two one-third of the way down from the stem end and remove pulp, cutting it in pieces. Cut the peach in small pieces and the marshmallows in quarters. Mix ingredients and add boiled salad dressing. Heap in the orange shell and arrange on lettuce leaf.

OYSTERS ON TOAST—One cup oysters, one tablespoon butter, one-quarter teaspoon salt; two tablespoons of thin cream, yolk of one egg. Clean and drain oysters, add them to melted butter and cook until plump. Add seasonings, cream and egg yolk, slightly beaten. Cook until thickened and serve on buttered toast.

* * *

MILK SHERBET—One-half cup milk, four tablespoons sugar, three tablespoons lemon juice. Mix the sugar and lemon juice, add milk and freeze in small freezer or in a baking-powder can. (For individual portions it is well to use the powder can, being sure it is water-tight.) Set in a large bowl and pack ice and salt around the can, using one part salt to three parts of finely chopped ice. Stir and scrape mixture from sides of can until frozen. This will take about 30 minutes. You can serve this at once or repack in fresh ice and salt and hold until ready.

FEEDING CHILDREN—There is an obligation on every mother to see that her children eat the right foods. Let's take up the matter of desserts.

Dessert is one thing that the child is eager for, and eats with avidity. Therefore, the planning of that dessert should be careful—taking advantage of his enthusiasm to give him in palatable form some of the elements he needs.

If potatoes are a goodly part of his dinner, the dessert that day should not be corn starch or tapioca pudding. On the other hand, if his vegetables are spinach and tomatoes, the corn starch and tapioca are ideal.

FRUIT is always a satisfactory dessert, and it can be served in many attractive ways, whatever the first course may be. In fact, the first course can be "fruit soup" which is made by using 2 teaspoons of corn starch, 1 teaspoon of arrowroot to about three cups of liquid. Here is a typical soup that I think all children will like.

Smoth 1 teaspoon of arrowroot in about ¼ cup of cold water. Then add to it 1 cup of juice from a can of pineapple, 1¾ cups of water, and ½ cup of mint jelly. Cook until slightly thickened, stirring to prevent lumping. Serve cold, garnishing with a sprig of mint to give it a festive air, and I think Bob and Helen will be mightily impressed.

RICE PUDDING WITH FRUIT—Boil ½ cup of rice for 20 minutes in plenty of salted water. I would allow at least 3 cups of water to this amount and you may have to make it 4 cups. When cooked, drain and plunge in cold water and then drain again. Add ½ cup milk, ¼ cup sugar, 1 tablespoon lemon juice. Beat 1 egg and add. Now place in a buttered baking dish and cover the top with well-drained halved peaches (canned, of course), dot any between-spaces with raisins, sprinkle with confectioner's sugar and brown quickly in a hot oven.

TOMATO AND EGG ON TOAST—Place one-half of a firm tomato in baking tin, dot with butter, season with pepper and salt and bake until soft clear through, about 20 minutes. Turn upside down on a piece of buttered toast, removing the skin. Place a poached egg on the tomato and a piece of crisp bacon atop the entire thing.

Thousands call this test
"The most important step of my life!"

NONE of them realized, when they made this simple change in diet, what far-reaching influence for good it would have. You, too, may be skeptical until you make the test.

But do as these others did—and see! Eliminate caffein from your diet for thirty days—drink Postum with your meals instead. Then judge!

Amazing results!

These others found that, with Postum as their mealtime drink, sleeplessness vanished. They slept soundly, naturally. Nervousness, too, disappeared, and with it, headaches and indigestion. They became more alert at work, happier at play. Where they had been, unconsciously, half-sick before, they were now gloriously well!

Nor did they miss anything in mealtime enjoyment! They found that Postum has a distinctive flavor all its own—a rich, full-bodied flavor that millions prefer to that of any other drink.

Order Postum today—start the 30-day test! See what a difference it makes in the way you feel—in the way you look! Your grocer has Postum in two forms—Instant Postum, prepared instantly in the cup, and Postum Cereal, the kind you boil. Both are made of roasted whole wheat and bran—no trace of any artificial stimulant in them. Both cost much less than most other mealtime drinks.

PATRICIA PITT'S SPRIGHTLY COMMENT ON PITTSBURGH SOCIETY HAPPENINGS

Bright Days of Southland Prompts Pittsburgh Colony to Renewed Social Activities

SCIENTISTS say that the human mind works equally well in any weather. Well, maybe the mind does function as well, but I do know that gray days of sleet do affect the temperament, particularly the social temperament. Who ever feels like giving a brilliant ball or who ever heard dinner conversation scintillate when the winds were no longer winds, but gales, and gales that popped snow flakes in one's mouth when one gasped for breath?

All of this is an elaborate bit of what the psychologists would call rationalization. They would accuse me, I'm sure, of making these excuses just because I want to talk about Palm Beach.

And who wouldn't want to talk about that gay winter city of the South when no less an important person than Mrs. W. Harry Brown entertains? Mrs. Brown's entertainments are things to be talked about, as you know, for she has the reputation of one of the most popular hostesses of Pittsburgh, London, and the South.

This charming and distinguished Pittsburgh society woman gave a dinner Tuesday night in honor of Sir Richard and Lady Muriel Paget, of London, who recently arrived at Palm Beach. Judge and Mrs. Clarence Norton Goodwin, of Lake Forest, Ill., and Washington, who motored with the honor guests from Tampa, were also among the guests. Another distinguished person at the dinner was Baron Ivan de Lilienfeld.

Following the dinner, the guests went to the music room to hear Nina Morgan, coloratura soprano, of the Metropolitan Opera, and John Courtney, organist.

FLEECE PASTOR UNDER 'SPELL'

"They cast a spell over me," declared the Rev. Robert Jackson, Negro pastor of the Triumph of the East Church, Wylie avenue, in reporting to city detectives how two men had robbed him of $140. The pastor said that he met the strangers at Penn and Highland avenues and that they told him they wanted to deposit about $500 in a reliable bank. The Rev. Jackson recommended a bank and to prove that it was good he withdrew more than $100 to show that the depository was willing to return money.

Adding some of the money he had withdrawn to a roll of bills he had in his possession, he then placed the entire amount in an envelope the strangers gave him. The new acquaintances then took the envelope and placed $100 of their money in it. They then gave the envelope to the pastor and told him to deposit it for them. The envelope contained paper.

"I can still feel the needles of that spell prickling me," the Rev. Jackson bemoaned as he left the Detective Bureau.

SURVEY COVERS DEPOSIT DATA

The seven southwestern Pennsylvania counties, which comprise the Pittsburgh district, have 24 per cent of the state's population and 37 per cent of the bank deposits, it is shown in a study of the district made by the Pittsburgh Chamber of Commerce. The result of the survey, which was made by H. W. Correll, statistician, is included in a pamphlet being distributed today by the chamber.

The national and state banks and trust companies of the seven counties have total deposits of $1,503,631,638, or 37.8 per cent of the deposits of the state. The surplus and profits of the banks, amounting to $253,126,427, is 24.2 per cent of the total surplus and profits of the banks in the state.

The counties included in the Pittsburgh district are Armstrong, Beaver, Butler, Fayette, Washington, Westmoreland and Allegheny counties.

DISALLOW PROTEST IN DEBATE FEUD

ELLWOOD CITY, Pa., March 9.—A protest by Ellwood City against Freedom in the recent debates here was overruled at a meeting of the executive committee of the Beaver Valley Schoolmen's League. Ellwood claimed a Freedom debater had taken part on both the negative and affirmative teams. The board ruled that since the youth had not taken part in two separate contests the protest could not stand.

BARBERS DO 'BIT' TO AID MINERS

Several hundred men, women and children got the trimming of their lives and some of them had close shaves yesterday afternoon at Renton, when seven strangers invaded the town. No arrests were made, nor were any complaints filed. In fact, the striking miners and their families seemed to enjoy the experience.

It all came about as a result of one of the striker's sons visiting him recently at the union barracks at Renton. David Gravelle is one of the old-time coal miners at Renton. One of Gravelle's sons remained with his father in the mines, but the other went out into the world to learn another trade.

The son who sought his fortune outside is William Gravelle, now a barber at East Pittsburgh. He looked at his father and other residents of the dingy wooden barracks in which they are now living and said:

"Father, you need a haircut!"

"Sure, I do and so do lots of other people around here, but money is scarce in the barracks."

That gave the son an idea. He went back to East Pittsburgh and gathered a few of his barber friends together.

"Everybody is doing something for the miner. They are given food and clothing, but nobody seems to have remembered tonsorial treatment. Let's go out on our first afternoon off and give them haircuts and shaves."

His friends agreed and yesterday, for the first time in many moons for some of the strikers, haircuts and shaves were provided free of charge. The barbers who participated included Gravelle, R. P. Hassler, Frank Laslow, Benny Penort, George Shephard, Fred C. Haiburg, J. T. Etzler and A. E. Davis, all of East Pittsburgh.

It's an entirely new form of soap . . . that leaves no film on dishes . . . that saves drying . . . that cannot harm the dainty smoothness of your skin.

Millions use it daily—acclaim it the greatest household blessing in 25 years.

In fairness to yourself, please test this new soap creation. Try Super Suds just 15 minutes today. And we'll guarantee you'll never be satisfied with any other soap.

Prove to yourself how it saves your hands. How it makes dishes gleam and glisten. How it saves your time and energy, too.

You'll marvel at these unique results

Super Suds is a completely new type of soap . . . different in form, action and results from any you have ever known before.

[It offers you a wonderful new way to wash dishes . . . a way that banishes soapy film . . . saves your hands . . . gets dishes sparkling clean with far less work]

It is actually soap in tiny thin-walled "beads" . . . the result of a revolutionary manufacturing discovery.

Scientists developed it. Found the way to make soap of microscopic thinness. Many times as thin as flake or chip soap. By far the thinnest type of soap ever discovered.

You can see the difference the instant you pour it into your dishpan. See it in the rich, quick-acting, suds. See it in the lustrous polish on your dishes and in the velvet smoothness of your hands.

Use it for everything Laundry—Dishwashing

Super Suds was especially designed for general household use. You can use it for laundry and dishwashing too.

It cannot harm the daintiest fabrics . . . washes lingerie with complete safety. And for the heavy work on washday, it is absolutely without a rival.

Super Suds dissolves more rapidly than any soap you've ever used before. Its lively suds penetrate every fold of cloth . . . seep around every fibre . . . wash away all grease and grime.

There's no need to use your washboard now. No need to scrub and rub until your back just aches from the strain. Leave it to Super Suds to soak loose the dirt.

And with Super Suds you'll save a great deal of time in rinsing alone. That's because it dissolves so completely. No soap particles are left clinging to fabrics.

Your clothes dry out snowy white. There's never a trace of soap stain. You simply won't be able to realize that a change of laundry soap can make such an amazing difference in the whiteness of your weekly wash.

Super Suds is surprisingly inexpensive . . . It's the biggest ten-cent box of soap on the market. Simply in fairness to yourself, we urge you to try Super Suds at once. Put it on your grocery list today!

LEVINE HOPS TO MIAMI; PLANS GIANT PLANE

MIAMI, Fla., March 9.—(AP.)—Coming from an unexpected direction, Charles A. Levine's plane Columbia completed its Havana-Miami flight this morning in two hours and two minutes and landed before more than a dozen people sighted it.

The plane, piloted by Wilmer Stultz and carrying Levine and Miss Mabel Boll as passengers, flew over Coral Gables at 11:25 a. m., and three minutes later landed at the Fifty-fourth street airport.

The Columbia took off from Havana at 9:23 a. m.

Levine announced he would stay here long enough to refuel and take off at 3 p. m. for Palm Beach. The next jump from there, he said, will be to St. Petersburg.

He said his New York-to-Havana nonstop flight demonstrated the feasibility of air commerce over the route and added that trans-Atlantic service will be an accomplished fact within a year. A 6,000 horsepower, seven-motored, 50-passenger plane with 180-foot wing spread now is in process of construction at his plant for trans-Atlantic service, he said.

Flying this morning was a bit rough, with a quartering wind, Levine said. The usual Havana-Miami flying time is about two and a half hours. Only a small party greeted the fliers.

2 DIE, 15 HURT IN BUS CRASH

CHARLES CITY, Ia., March 9.—(AP.)—Two children were killed and 15 others were injured last evening when a speeding Rock Island passenger train crashed into a school bus bearing 17 children home from a country school about 12 miles southwest of here.

The dead: Roger Schuffur, 10, and Harrison May, 12.

Eight of the injured were seriously hurt and were taken to a Waterloo hospital on the train. Seven others were treated by physicians and were taken home. Four of the children escaped with minor bruises.

The train, 40 minutes late, was speding to make up time when the accident happened.

'COMET' PROVES CAMERA ERROR

The new "comet" announced recently as having been discovered by an astronomer named Filipoff in Algiers was not a comet at all, but a spurious image on a photographic plate. This announcement was made by Dr. Harlow Shapley, director of the Harvard College Observatory, which acts as the American clearing house for news of astronomical discoveries.

Another man arrested in connection with the robbery implicated Atway, police say, and the latter was taken into custody at the United States naval base at Hampton Roads.

JERRY The Epic of a Girl Who Had to Wait · by Elenore MEHERIN

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE

Jerry King, good-looking, charming and 19, meets Saxon Rhodes, a young architect, and falls in love with him at first sight. Her fascinating mother, Marza, warns here that idealists like Saxon make unsatisfactory husbands. Jerry sees Saxon kissing Tess Willi, but still clings to her ideal and refuses a marriage proposal from Heine Ross, a wealthy young suitor. Saxon runs across her while she is sketching and later they kiss each other rapturously in the moonlight. Marza tells Jerry she hopes she is not counting on marrying Saxon. Wondering if she had better give Saxon up, she gets a reassuring note from him. Saxon tries to argue himself into a belief that love is the only thing that counts and gaily makes plans with Jerry for their future. His uncle insists that he go abroad to complete his studies. Tess Willi also goes to Paris, Jerry is worried. She receives five postale in strange handwriting and becomes frightened. At last Saxon writes her he has been ill.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.

"BUT John is wild about her and she of him. Tess plans to stay a long while, so I suppose it's up to me to take her around—"

Jerry reading that last tactless line could have flown to Paris. She fancied herself blazing into that little cafe in the Quartier—storming up to their table, wildly boxing Tess' ears—

The arrogance of him writing this so coolly as though she, Jerry, were a nun—were a grandmother! She felt as though she were breathing fire.

Two weeks later came this—tucked in a long, happy letter. Oh, I guess he was quite strong now—quite himself again!

"Tess has bought the jolliest little French car you ever saw. It's larky to have a bus to take you wherever you want to go. She likes Antoinette and John, so the four of us get along lovely. Tess is crazy to go into Spain; wants the four of us to go on a sketching tour. John and Antoinette are made for it—"

CHAPTER XIV.

TESS wanted the four of them to go to Spain—jaunt around in a jolly little French car!

"If he goes," thought Jerry, feeling very pale and wild. "If he goes—"

She didn't finish the threat. She began visualizing them flying about romantic valleys of Spain, coming upon old Moorish castles, wandering here through long-red-gold autumn days, soft, intoxicating nights.

If Saxon Rhodes went on this trip with Tess Willi it would, of course, be the end of things for her. She wondered how he dared write of it. Mustn't he know how the mere suggestion would inflame her?

She grew weak with her fury as she contemplated this brazen plan. Tess would, of course, consider herself very bohemian—one of the intelligentsia—one of the enlightened experimenters in love and life. All the while she would be counting on making her experiment. Enmeshing Saxon—and for life!

The curse of it that Tess Willi had the money to live this golden adventure—but she, Jerry, must remain helpless, 6,000 miles removed from him!

She went walking about the reservoir, a white despair in her heart.

At the bench where they had sat that last night, their hands tucked so tremblingly together, she paused. "He won't go—of course he won't. Don't be silly!"

"But why shouldn't he? It's just a sketching tour. He can easily excuse it on that ground. Do you want him to be lonely? Do you begrudge him a little fun just because you can't share it?"

She gripped the bench, shook it roughly: "I wouldn't go! I wouldn't even want to!"

"A man would!"

She sat down and clasped her hands tightly against her knees. She wished distractedly that she were near him; that she had, somehow, gone with him. The two years were leaping to an eternity that they would never bridge.

That night Marza was giving a dinner. Robert Caples had returned from a long ramble over Southern Europe. He sat next to Marza and smiled each time her eyes met his; smiled as though her mere look gave him a radiant joy.

"I wish I had what she's got!" thought Jerry, burningly. She wished she had a look that would reach across 6,000 miles and draw on Saxon Rhodes relentlessly as the mere thought of him drew on her.

Suddenly she found herself listening intently to Robert's talk. He was a fascinating man—an amateur musician who might easily have risen to the heights but for his utterly undisciplined and roving nature. Robert was homely with his slack blond hair and long, nervous features, rapacious—looking as though goaded with inner hungers. When he sat at the piano, or now, as he glanced at Marza, the wolf expression vanished. He became humble and boyish.

Jerry liked him because he was so violently alive—rude, intolerant, mercilessly sincere.

Robert was telling of a house party he had attended in Florence.

"Ann Pryor," said he, "and Sebastian Lee drove down from Paris."

"Together?" interjected Jerry like the firing of a shot.

"Yes."

"Married?"

Robert smiled. "Not particularly."

"It seems to be the vogue," said Jerry blandly and reaching over for Robert's cigarets, "for men and women to run about Europe in this child-of-joy fashion. We should all move over!"

"We're doing better, aren't we? I was under the impression that your generation had brought the vogue to America."

"Oh, in the 15-cent magazines!"

"And in the summer resorts," put in Flo Arnold quietly.

"That," said Jerry swiftly, "is altogether different. I wasn't meaning gin-parties and all the messy things that happen at them. But the gay, careless way that people in Paris go off on these expeditions together. Just as balmy and casual as though they were off for a cup of tea! It must be most delightful!"

"Patience," said Flo, shrugging. "We'll acquire grace with time. We're still quite parvenu and self-conscious—snatching at freedom but rating it sin. And terribly afraid we'll burn in hell for it. That's why we're all screaming at the top of our voices that the world is going to smash. Always the way when a time-honored tradition like the corset or feminine chastity is passing and a new experiment whether it be suffrage for women or wild oats for women is under way."

"We didn't become bearded and childless with the franchise. Now, even those of us who yelled the loudest for our rights have to be urged to vote. In another 20 years we'll be just as casual and just as sane about our freedom. The majority will look back and wonder what in heaven's name all the hullabaloo was about."

"The French," said Robert, "have long since reached this stage. Love is not a question of morals any more than sleeping and eating are. The Parisian takes love sans matrimony as debonairly as he plucks a rose from his garden—because it is sweet."

"Americans," thought Jerry bitterly, "seem to acquire the belle air of it with the greatest ease the moment they set foot on Parisian soil. He'll go, of course!"

She thought of sending a withering ultimatum; she thought of writing frankly and furiously.

But by the time her word reached him they might be deep into Spain. This prospect made her grimly quiet.

"I can do nothing," she thought. "If he wants to go, I can't alter it. I can't make him faithful just by demanding it—"

She went about feeling that her whole life was in ruins.

"There will be a year more of this—this kind of suspense," she thought abruptly. "I won't endure it!"

"You haven't given him a chance. He didn't say he was going."

She was torn by this conflict.

And finally she wrote a long, eager, pitifully revealing letter, letting him see that her heart and soul were his—entirely.

"I shouldn't do this," she thought. "But I don't care!"

And she became buoyant, writing like this, feeling him near; hearing his voice, huskily tender. Oh, he loved her. No one had ever loved so gloriously, so completely before.

All her doubts vanished. They were baseless, unfair. She would wait—and trust to the uttermost limit. When you love—you do.

Sunday she went yachting with Heinie. End of the season. Evening—the tawny twilight vanishing rapidly to this soft, purple dusk that came around and about one tenderly—an embrace.

Jerry sat on the hatch, humming softly—all about her the languor and passion of the autumn night.

Nell Cartright, with her head dreamily on Tom Bain's shoulder, sang in a warm, stirring contralto: "I love you so." Little Jane Drury, soft and pink for her 16 years, put her arms happily about young Frank Upton and ordered huskily "Sing Me to Sleep." Whereupon she cuddled blissfully in his arms.

Jerry closed her eyes and sighed. Her heart was terribly full—almost bursting. Where was he tonight? Thinking of her? Yearning for her?

She fancied his arm about her waist, warm, rough cheek brushing on hers. Sitting like this and watching the pale moon rising over Alcatraz. They two alone, removed from all those others—even from the sound of singing voices—love making them a world in themselves.

What would she do if he changed? Sit lonely like this—always? Through a whole lifetime?

She saw Heinie moving about in the shadows—tall, lanky, very quiet. He was helping Bud Malone down the deck. Bud, waving his arms and singing at the top of his voice, ordered: "Shing, Heinie; now you shing!"

Heinie's arm swinging out, pulling Bud back as he teetered perilously to the gunwale.

"Shay, never mind hugging me! Gesh I can drown. Thash all right. Shing, shing!"

Heinie laughing chummily—obeying. The voice reached Jerry—sweet, deep and gentle. It stirred her. Poor Heinie. Strange she had never felt so intimately sorry for him before.

But he looked big, capable and kind going down there helping Bud. Then she saw him coming toward her, his hand out—smiling.

This eagerness of his touched her to the quick. She thought with a pang: "Heinie and I are alike—oh, loving too much!"

She took his outreached hand. She thought, pitying him, liking him, "Oh, how easy—how sweet if it were he—good old Heinie!"

He dropped at her feet, his brown eyes, adoring and faithful like a noble dog's, touching a moment on hers.

"Jerry, let me talk—let me say some things. Please! I've just about go to. Things I'd like you to know—like you to remember. They may make a difference."

Madge Reveals to Lillian the Secret Confided to Her by Noel Veritzen

LILLIAN'S vehement anger and her grotesque wish for Philip Veritzen touched off my mirth as if it had been an explosive waiting for a match. I sat down hastily in the nearest chair and gave myself up to helpless laughter in which, after a frowning moment, she joined.

"Yes, I'll agree old Phil would afford an amusing spectacle if my wish only could come true," she acknowledged at last. "Unfortunately, we are hampered by tyrannical laws. Otherwise we could conquer that mulishness of his, although we probably would have to kill him first. But do you know, I have a hunch Phil has something in the back of his mind that will surprise us all. That spiel concerning the Lincoln dame indicates that, though why in the name of Ra—that beloved of the cross-worders—he's so interested in somebody he never saw before, gets me."

"You forget," I said, "that I told him I was sure Miss Lincoln was a Transvanian."

She struck her hands together in patent exasperation.

"I ought to be etherized while they insert some new cells into my dome," she said. "I had completely forgotten his yen in that direction. Of course that's the answer. He's an outsize filbert upon anything connected with that country. I guess you know better than I that he never missed a function when the royal family of Transvania was cavorting around these parts a few months ago. He was invited to a lot of 'em of course, and into the rest he bribed and bluffed his way. But I can't figure out what's back of his craze."

I stirred uncomfortably as I realized that I possessed a key to the riddle. Ought I to repeat the disclosure Noel had made to our family when the new occupants of The Larches first came up for discussion? Quickly I decided that I was justified in telling the tale to Lillian, whose discretion is only equaled by her loyalty. Besides I knew that she was an older friend of Noel Veritzen's than I was, and that it must have been only an accident that she did not share the knowledge he had given to me.

"Neither could I"—vainly I tried to make my voice careless and casual—"until I found out that Mr. Veritzen was born in Transvania."

Lillian stared at me in patent amazement.

"Say that again, slowly—and softly," she said gibingly after an instant, and I repeated my words.

"Well! for disconnecting the radio!" she exclaimed. "Where did you get that?"

"Noel inadvertently let it slip one day when we were discussing the new neighbors at The Larches," I said. "Of course Dicky, Mary and I assured him that we would not repeat it, but—to—you—" my voice trailed off in embarrassed fashion.

Lillian laughed lightly.

"I don't think Noel would mind me," she said. "And I fancy you can trust me to let the information stop with me."

"I fancy so, too," I said dryly.

She tossed me a kiss, then dropped into a chair with her elbows on her knees and her chin cupped in her palms. With a resigned look at her, I seated myself in another chair. When Lillian takes that familiar attitude it always presages a session with her own thoughts which it is not wise to disturb.

But she was not to complete her problem solving undisturbed upon this occasion. The noise of a motor turning into the drive came to our ears followed by Mary's lilting voice saying, "Here they come! Where's Auntie Madge?"

TOMORROW'S HOROSCOPE

Saturday, March 10

There are ways to success from many directions, but from each there is only one right way.—ANON.

ACCORDING to the rather weak lunar operations, this day may not be a notable one unless it be made so by following an impulse to strife, contention and irritability, under the lunar square to the belligerent Mars, a conflagration likewise inciting to rash deeds and insurrections. An ill position of Saturn will not tend to mitigate negative conditions.

Those whose birthday it is are likely to have a year of turmoil and stress unless they keep a firm watch on tongue and temper, and refrain from rash and impulsive acts. There may be also small worries and delays.

A child born on this day may be disposed to be rash, impulsive and possibly quarrelsome, unless given early discipline and correction. Under control it may develop aggressive and constructive qualities.

Notable Nativity: W. D. Porter, Commodore, United States Navy.

NAB FOUR MORE IN RUSSELLTON SLAYING

Arrested in connection with the slaying of Michael Yarsavage, 38, of Nant-y-Glo, five young men were lodged in the county jail last night by county detectives, making a total of nine now being held as a result of the murder. The four are Alex Simon, 21, of Springdale; Julius Frank, 20; Louis Braizette, 25, and Frank Cubic, 20, all of Russellton.

They are accused of having told five youths, all sons of striking miners, that Yarsavage was attempting to get a position as a strikebreaker. The reputed slayers of Yarsavage, who were arrested Tuesday following the killing, are alleged to have admitted to detectives that they intended only to administer a severe beating to Yarsavage, but did not intend to kill him. The four arrested yesterday were taken into custody at Russellton, where county detectives and the suspects held had gone to take a moving picture re-enactment of the murder to be used by the district attorney.

MEDITATIONS of a MARRIED WOMAN

by HELEN ROWLAND

LOVE-A-GRAMS

LOVE is a relic of the Victorian Age, found chiefly in the movies, the imagination and the dictionary.

Like the buffalo and pre-war champagne, it still exists, here and there. But in the face of eugenics, companionate marriage, petting parties and the growing antagonism of the sexes, it may soon take its place beside the Dinosaurus in the public museum.

* * *

We speak of "falling in love" as though it were a pit, or the Grand Canyon; but love is the light on the mountain-top to which we must eternally climb.

HELEN ROWLAND

Love is a glorified friendship, highly intensified, flavored with romance, spiced with passion and sprinkled with star-dust.

Love, in the romanticist,' is expressed in soulful kisses and by his inability to do any work for days at a time.

Love, in a bachelor, is demonstrated by his willingness to tie himself to a woman for life, and thereby exchange the admiration and embraces of a lot of women for the criticism and coffee kisses of just one.

Love, in a husband, is shown by his willingness to give his wife anything that will make her happy, from the heart of the salad to a Paris divorce.

Love, in a college sheik, is evinced by his ability to think of somebody besides himself for a whole hour at a time, or to shave off his pet mustache to gratify a girl's aesthetic ideals.

* * *

Love, in a philanderer, is demonstrated by his inability to think of any OTHER woman, while he happens to be kissing a particular one.

Love, in any man, is the essence of unselfishness—and the most selfish thing in the world.

It is the flash of light, by which one sees clearly that to give to another and sacrifice for another is after all the magic way to get the greatest happiness out of life.

Love is what inspired the caveman with a yearning to pull a woman around by the hair, and what makes the modern man let a woman pull him around by the nose.

Many things are mistaken for love, such as infatuation, summer dalliance, moonsickness and petting. But these no more resemble real love, than a quick lunch resembles a banquet on Olympus.

Love, like an appendicitis operation, is something that can happen to you only ONCE in a life-time—and that's enough!

Novelty Hose

Attracting attention to knee, ankle or instep does not suggest immodesty these days, when so little is concealed! The latest novelty in silk chiffon hose is the stocking embroidered in self-tone silk floss in floral or geometric designs. The embroidery will appear just below the knee, worked around the ankle, or upon the instep.

Kill the Moths

Should moths be found in a carpet, a cloth wrung out of very hot water should be laid over the affected part and pressed with a hot iron.

PROMISES LONG, HEALTHY LIFE TO WEAK, THIN-BLOODED PEOPLE

Scientists Discover "Mysterious Substance" in Beef Livers That Makes Rich Red Blood and Creates Strength, Vigor and Vitality—Often in 8 Days.

In New York and other big cities progressive physicians are prescribing a diet of beefs liver.

They have found by actual tests that patients far gone with pernicious anemia—so far gone that life itself was only a matter of months—have been restored to health.

In order to get this "Mysterious Substance" or vitamines in a greatly condensed form, one of New Yorks famous Laboratories is putting up a liquid elixir known to Pharmacists as Hemo-Liver.

This preparation is not a patent medicine—the vitamines are extracted by a new process from fresh beefs liver, so that that the blood making, health creating substance is saved.

It is not a patent medicine but a pleasant to take elixir which all thin blooded people and especially those who need more vigor and vitality are urged to try.

Hemo-Liver is now dispensed by all druggists who keep abreast of the times with the distinct understanding that if one bottle does not help—wonderfully—your money will be returned.

Men and women who are suffering from lowered vitality, general weakness, overwork, nervous breakdown or anemia can put their faith in Hemo-Liver. For feeble old people, girls 13 to 18 and in convalescence, it won't fail. It strengthens the nerves, increases the red blood cells, promotes health and rebuilds energy so quickly that often physicians are astonished. You can get Home-Liver at May's Drug Stores.

FAY KING

By FAY KING

A DOG that can talk is causing quite a lot of comment.

I do not think it is nearly so important for animals to learn to speak our language as it is for us to learn to understand their language.

Those who love animals understand them perfectly, and what animals say in their own way is much more important to us than anything they could say in ours.

The action of the old cow on the country farm often says a great deal more than the educated weather man does! The cow is a great weather prophet, as are also cats and birds, and the wise farmer watches them.

Horses have long been good advisers of riders who understand their language. A horse can feel danger long before a man does and warns his rider. In countries where the water is apt to be bad the rider never drinks where his horse will not drink.

The family cat, the pet dog, even the little canary, have large vocabularies which are easily understood by their owners.

Dogs have come for help, and had no trouble in expressing by their worried barks and frantic urge to "tell" people to follow them, and rescue their master.

Animals laugh, show their affection, and understanding. Animals reason.

Animals also warn you when they do not feel well and do not wish to be disturbed. If this warning is ignored you cannot blame them for defending themselves as best they can from those who continue to tease and abuse them!

The man who understands his dog or horse is in constant conversation with him, not limited to a few phrases he might learn that sound like ours!

HOW TO KEEP WELL

U.S. Senator From New York

Tell the Doctor the Truth and Save Trouble

OF course, he had in mind something else than health when James Freeman Clarke said this wise thing: "It may make a difference to all eternity whether we do right or wrong today."

DR COPELAND

It is true, and unfortunately true, that many a boy and girl disregard the everlasting penalty of habits which make for shortened life and which may result in such physical degeneration as to destroy the happiness of the next generation. The impulse of the moment may lead you to do something which you will repent of all the rest of your life.

To my mind one of the surest evidences of the kindliness of Nature is that the effects of most of our shortcoming can be overcome. By the exercise of self-denial and common sense we may overcome them. However, if the blood becomes contaminated by reason of evil association, there may begin in the system an undermining process which will shorten the life of the victim and be transmitted to the children unto the third and fourth generation.

I have no desire to alarm any one of my readers. If by any chance one such person has strayed from the path of righteousness and has acquired a disease which untreated is capable of resulting in all the evil I have mentioned, there is a means of escape.

Among the wise sayings of Benjamin Franklin is this admonition: "Don't misinform your doctor nor your lawyer."

If you suspect that your blood has become contaminated, confide this fact to your physician. Tell him the whole truth. Then he will not be in the dark, but will know just exactly what course to pursue to spare you and posterity the blighting effects of your transgression.

Many a suicide has resulted from the fear of the evil effects which may follow certain blood infections. These sad endings have terminated careers which need not have been blasted by a step of this sort. There is a means of escape. Your doctor will tell you what should be done, and he will outline for you a system of treatment which will overcome the consequences of your transgression.

We may make another application of what Dr. Clarke says. It makes a lot of difference to you and your children whether you have the right treatment for your ailment. If you go to an able physician and he is given full charge of your case, he will save you from the dreadful consequences of what you have done.

Under no circumstances go to an unscrupulous quack. Find a first-class physician, an upright, honest gentleman, as well as a skilful practitioner of medicine.

You will have no difficulty in reading between the lines of what I have written today. The fathers and mothers will understand, and the children should be taught early enough the significance of right living and the proper medical attention if misfortune befall.

Does Your Stomach Trouble You?

—Swords and Stauffer

Mrs. Florence Singley

York, Pa.—"I was about as miserable as anybody could be, my food was not digesting properly and I had sick headaches. I became very weak and nervous. A lady asked me why I didn't take Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery and it was through her suggestion that I did. Three bottles helped me wonderfully—it cleared my stomach of catarrhal mucus, that was the cause of my food not digesting properly, and in the course of time the sick headaches gradually left me, I became stronger and have little or no sign of nervousness. I can surely praise the 'Discovery' for what it did for me. I advise everyone with stomach trouble to give it a fair trial."—Mrs. Florence Singley, 218 Green St.

For the Lovelorn -:- By ELEANOR GALE

Undecided

DEAR MISS GALE:

I think your advice wonderful. Thought probably you could help me in my troubles. I am 26, the mother of two boys aged 5 and 2. My husband has always been a wonderful provider, but very jealous. He works day and night and I sit alone with my children at home sometimes waiting until he comes in at 1:30 a. m. and often it is 2:30. One morning he came in at 4 a. m. Now we have a roomer whose wife left him and my husband has accused me of being too familiar with this man and threatened me if I told him about it. Well I asked the man not to speak to me as my husband did not like it. When he heard what I did he struck me in the mouth and choked me. Now I hate him, but find that I have a warm feeling for the other man and feel he likes me, but for the children's sake I have tried to endure it all. I have been a true, devoted wife the entire seven years of my life with him and he can find no fault, but often links me with other men. I am not guilty, but feel like leaving. What must I do?

UNDECIDED.

If talking doesn't have any effect on your husband's actions then a lawyer is a better person to consult than this department, my dear. I don't blame you for feeling bitter about it all, but a broken home is a bad thing for children, so be very sure of yourself before taking legal steps.

Correspondents are reminded that all letters sent to this department must be written on one side of the paper only, and that no personal replies are ever given.

Sally Ann

DEAR MISS GALE:

I have been reading your column for some time and enjoy it very much. It has taught me many lessons and others I'm sure. Now, Miss Gale, I have a question to ask and would be very thankful if you would answer it. Are cousins permitted to marry?

SALLY ANN.

Cousins may not marry in this state, my dear.

By CHARLES J. DOYLE,

PASO ROBLES, March 9.—In the face of 10 casualties, the Pirate Regulars and Yannigans were slated to begin their camp battles this afternoon. Twice the opening scrap has been postponed, but Manager Bush this morning declared there would be a battle of the vets and rooks today, weather permitting.

Although the roster shows none with any serious afflictions, 10 members of the squad are ailing. The sickness has overtaken each one of the five stalwart righthanders who have been played up as the five aces ever since the club has been in camp.

Remy Kremer, Carmen Hill, John Miljus, Burleigh Grimes and Lee Meadows are all undergoing treatment at this writing, Meadows being the only one fit for slab duty. Lee, suffering from sinus trouble will pitch for the Hooligans today.

Kremer is on the mend after having gone through a seige of "flu." Kremer developed a fever that mounted to 104, but the club physician has been giving him every attention with the result that Frenchy is sitting up and taking some little nourishment.

Hill is suffering from an old injury of the back. Hill is not appearing in uniform. When the team goes to San Francisco, the bespectacled hurler will call on a specialist for treatment. There is a chance that

SHOCKER IS THROUGH

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla., March 9—That tribe of vanishing Americans, known as spitball pitchers, is about to lose another member after all. What has been regarded as only a threat by Urban Shocker to force a better contract from the Yankees now seems to be more than that. Shocker has sent another message to Miller Huggins and in it Urban plays a triple role, being both frank and earnest.

Huggins already has started to look around for another pitcher to replace Shocker.

SHARKEY TO BE AT BEST FOR RISKO

NEW YORK, March 9.—(INS.)—The Jack Sharkey who is training here for his bout with Johnny Risko next Monday is not the boastful, confident Sharkey who was knocked out by Jack Dempsey, nor is he the careless, ring-rusty Sharkey who muddled through a 10-round draw with Tom Heeney. He is the savage, relentless Sharkey who annihilated his Boston rival, Jimmy Maloney, in four rounds last spring.

Sharkey has lost his bombastic pose and isn't telling the world what he will do to Risko. He is serious and far from loquacious.

As far as physical condition goes, the former sailor is in fine shape. He is down to 196 pounds and gave a neat exhibition of boxing against two sparring partners in his initial workout here. Sharkey peppered Lou Bogash and Jack Gagnon for four rounds and maintained a fast pace throughout the drill.

Risko also boxed four rounds against two Cleveland light-heavyweights, Frank Lennon and Jeff Baulknight.

NOTES of the BOXERS

THE all-star card signed for the weekly show at Motor Square Garden Monday night should give the fans more of a kick than they have been able to get out of the fighters with high-sounding names to date. Favorites have been paired off for four eight-round numbers, and, as each has won his spurs, the fans know just about what to expect. Tub Phillips tops the bill against Pete Petrolle, a newcomer here, but a lad who checked his winning streak of nine straight bouts in Erie recently, holding him to a draw. In the semi-final, Jack Katkish, who knocked out Nick Susnell at Motor Square a few weeks ago, boxes Rudy Ceder of Tarentum, himself a knockout artist. Young Rudy, popular Charleroi schoolboy, and Jack Bany, a rugged mixer from McKeesport, face each other in the second bout, and, in the opener, U. S. Carpentier of New Kensington, normally a windup or semi-final boxer, and Patsy Gallagher meet a third time.

Willie Davies and Jackie Rodgers, Negro flyweight of the North Side, have been matched to box the windup at Motor Square Garden Monday night a week. Rodgers also is matched for a return bout with Mickey Doyle at Johnstown, March 29.

Tommy Goodwin, Jules Beck's heavyweight, will compete in Jerry Sach's tournament in Cleveland beginning next Monday. Beck also is managing Dick Gibbons, of McKeesport, and has a windup pending for the latter at Washington, Pa.

The amateur boxers of New York who appear against Pittsburgh's best at Motor Square Garden tomorrow tonight clash with a Cleveland team in Cleveland tonight. It's no trick for an amateur boxer to compete in two or three short bouts in one night in a tournament, so that the Cleveland contests should serve merely to warm up the visitors for SPRING football practice at the University of Pittsburgh will begin on Monday, March 19, at the stadium. The date has just been set by Head Coach Sutherland, and at the same time he makes it known that the practice will be the most extensive, both as to number of participants and duration, in the gridiron history of the local institution. We'll Hear Later From Bill Busch

By HARRY KECK,
Sun-Telegraph Sports Editor.

SOMEWHERE in Charley Pyle's Marathon race across the continent is Bill Busch of Millvale, who made the long trek all by himself last year. Since the start of the race he has not been mentioned in the news dispatches, which tell only about the leaders.

But somewhere in that pack Bill Busch is holding back waiting for the field to narrow down and some of the highly-touted stars to run themselves into the ground. And then he will be heard from.

There have been many inquiries about Busch since the start of the grind and some disappointment has been expressed because he has not been up among the leaders.

Busch is running his own race. He is running it according to a plan he mapped out long before he left Pittsburgh to report to Pyle. He told me he would lay well back and do his running when the proper moment arrived. He predicted that Willie Kolehmainen, the 40-year-old veteran of New York, would be unable to stand the gaff—and Kolehmainen set the pace for two days and then had to quit.

"No man his age is going to be able to beat young fellows in such a race," Busch said. "I give him 10 days at the most. He may be able to run 30 or 40 miles at a fast clip, but he can't do it day after day and keep going.

"Those who have not tried it before do not know what agony awaits them when they hit the desert. The heat will burn them up and they'll drop out in big bunches. After a little while there will be only a small group left. That will be time enough for me to think of going out in front. I'll save myself for the finish."

That's why we haven't heard about Bill Busch in the Marathon so far. It's a battle of 60 or more days, and they haven't been going a week. Barring illness or injury, Bill will be in there running when there will be something to run for. And don't bet that he won't WIN. He has the determination to stick, the experience gained from last year's trial and the heart and endurance to make it.

P. S.—The news just comes in that Busch had been located. He was in thirteenth place when the sixth day's grind started off this morning. He has started his moving-up process.

LAGREY'S PUNCH BEATS GANS

Joey LaGrey, Johnstown welterweight star, dropped California Joe Gans three times in their 10-round main bout at the Palisades, McKeesport, last night and romped off with the judges' decision.

LaGrey, returning to the ring after a lengthy layoff, occasioned by a fractured wrist, displayed a fine wallop and dumped Gans in the first round with a solid right to the chin and flopped him twice [illegible] in the sixth round. Gans weathered the storm and came back to make things interesting for LaGrey in the closing frames.

In the semi-final, Allen Beatty of Uniontown, a hard-hitting newcomer from the amateur ranks, won the decision over Mickey Solmen of New Castle in a hotly-contested eight-round bout. Beatty's superior punching won him the vote of the judges.

The bout between Chuck Zelnack of Glassport and Bill Shaw of Uniontown, was stopped by the referee with Zelnack an easy winner in the fourth round. Shaw, another

MOJAVE WELLS, March 9.—Arthur Newton was the first Pyle race runner to reach here. He covered the 32½ miles from Barstow in 4 hours and 48 minutes. His total elapsed time is 24 hours 28½ minutes.

Carl Dilks of New Castle, Pa., finished second yesterday, almost a half hour behind Newton.

Bill Busch, of Pittsburgh, has moved up into thirteenth place in elapsed time.

Ollie Wanttinen was third, three minutes behind Dilks.

Wanttinen is second in the point of elapsed time from Los Angeles, with 24 hours 32 minutes and 37 seconds against him.

Newton, who recently won a 100-mile race abroad, was fourth in elapsed time when the runners left Barstow. His performance is expected to place him in the lead for the complete race.

The time for yesterday's lap was several minutes under five hours.

One of the favorites, Nick Quomawahu, Indian runner from the Arizona Desert, has taken up the grind again after quitting once because of sore feet. He started where he left off Wednesday and was walking behind the field. When he passed through Barstow today he was about three hours behind those who had left this morning.

NOT UNEXPECTED

The passing of Blakeslee, who is divisional superintendent of the Stone and Webster Construction Company and who superintended the erection of the stadium and is now in charge of the building of the Cathedral of Learning, was not unexpected and did not come as a surprise. When Blakeslee stepped into the newly created post of athletic director last April, taking over most of the work that had previously been in the hands of Graduate Manager Karl E. Davis, it was believed that he would only remain

MANAGER CLEGHORN announced today that he would shake up his lineup for tomorrow night's game between the Pirates and Chicago Black Hawks on the Duquesne Garden ice.

The Bucco chieftain said he would start Bert McCaffrey at center on the secondary line, moving Herb Drury from center to left wing, McCurry going to the bench for relief duty when needed. McCaffrey's going on the line means that there also will be a change in the defense.

The bowling championship of the Allegheny County Chapter of the American Legion will be decided on Monday, March 19, when the Hill Top Memorial Post No. 438, winner of the Division 1 championship opposes the Tarentum Post No. 85, winner of the Division 2 title. No alleys have been chosen for the roll-off, but indications are that the Forward alleys in Squirrel Hill will be selected. Two teams, composed of the best bowlers of the Allegheny County American Legion posts have been entered in the American Duckpin Congress, scheduled to be held at the Haus alleys, North Side, from April 9 to April 21.

HOPPE BREAKS RECORD

NEW YORK, March 8.—(AP)—Willie Hoppe, former balkline champion, registered a sensational three-cushion billiard performance yesterday, when he defeated James M. Lewis of New York, former amateur champion, 50 to 5, in 15 innings, with high runs of 14 and 11.

The veteran cue star's performance came close to breaking the exhibition record, set by the late Bob Cannefax, when he ran off 50 points in 12 innings. It surpasses the three-cushion championship tournament record of 50 points in 16 innings, held by Otto Reiselt.

CHICAGO, March 9.—Frank Taberski of Schenectady, N. Y., national pocket billiard champion; Ralph Greenleaf, Philadelphia, and Erwin Rudolph, Chicago, former titleholders, and Pasquale Natalie, Baltimore, were tied for the lead in the national billiard tournament here today. Each has won two games.

Rudolph defeated Harry Wood of Duluth, 125-47, and Onofrio Lauri, New York, won, 125-13, over Harry Oswald of Pittsburgh in yesterday's matches. Lauri had a high run of 66.

Vets to Aid Boys' Nines

By JULIUS LEVIN

THE first definite information as to how the American Legion intends to take advantage of the $50,000 appropriated by the two major leagues for the purpose of assisting in the development and promotion of amateur baseball, has been received by the Allegheny County Chapter of the American Legion from its state headquarters in Philadelphia.

That the Allegheny county posts will play an active part in the big Americanization program, under which amateur baseball is listed as one of its main activities, is easily shown by the manner in which the county legion heads mapped out their program of procedure.

Legion posts throughout Allegheny county have been instructed to solicit the assistance of various community organizations such as the Rotary, Kiwanis, Lions and Chamber of Commerce in their immediate vicinities to help in the development of amateur junior baseball teams.

ELIMINATIONS PLANNED

The program calls for 12 regional championships throughout the United States, following which the winners will meet in a tournament to determine the champions of the East and West. The survivors then will be called to meet in a series to determine the national championship. The entire program has been placed in the hands of the American Legion.

Teams enrolled in the tournament must be registered with an American Legion post in its vicinity and all players must be specified at least 10 days before start of play. No team may register more than 15 players, all of whom must be under 17 years of age. Any player who will not be 17 before January 1, 1929, and is a bona fide resident of the community represented by the team of which he is a member, is eligible to compete.

The various leagues will be under the supervision of district chairman, appointed by the state executive committee of the American Legion, which has its official headquarters in Philadelphia. The chairman of the Allegheny county district more than likely will be a Pittsburgher.

All teams and players desiring to enroll in the Junior Baseball League must file an application blank that will be obtainable at any American Legion post.

PROVIDE FIELDS

One of the features of the proposed tournament under the supervision of the American Legion is that the various posts will make an effort to provide playing fields for the contestants, the lack of which in past years has handicapped the amateurs. Legion posts throughout Allegheny county have been instructed by the executive body to do all in their power to provide suitable diamonds for the staging of the games. In communities where no fields are available, steps will be taken to obtain a suitable playground for the elimination contests.

Once a player registers with a team for the tournament he will have to finish the season with that club or remain out of competition. Every boy desiring to enter the competition will be compelled to sign a contract assuring his club of his services throughout the tournament.

SPORT COMMENT -:- By James J. Long

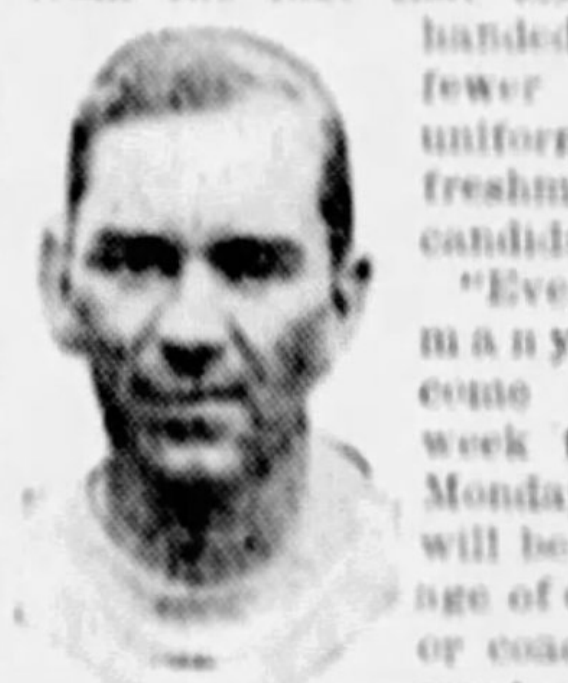
gram. "It happens sometimes that there are boys in school who are rich in native football material, but who are too backward to come out for the team.

"We desire to get them out this spring by giving them the necessary encouragement and making it clear to them that they will be helping their university by joining the squad at practice.

"IT doesn't matter how many come out; there will be enough uniforms to go round and enough coaches to give all the boys the right amount of attention. How well prepared we are in that respect may be judged from the fact that last fall we handed out no fewer than 110 uniforms to the freshman team candidates.



Charley Bowser

"Even if as many as 200 come out one week from next Monday there will be no shortage of equipment or coaching. We want every boy possessing any natural ability to come out and do his best.

"Even if we find only two or three boys of promise among those who would have remained in the background without showing us what they can do, we shall consider ourselves well repaid for the efforts made to get them to join in the practice."

ANOTHER marked change in the Panthers' football practice this spring will be noted in the length of time devoted to the drills.

"Conditions governing the practice of a veteran team and a new one are necessarily quite different," said Dr. Sutherland. "Last year, for instance, we had a team made up principally of veterans. Not only did they require less schooling in fundamentals than green players, but players of that type do not become very enthusiastic over mere practice anyhow. They want to play games. The result was that our spring practice a year ago lasted only 16 days.

"But we have got to do a great deal of rebuilding for next season, and consequently we are going to have an unusually large quantity of comparatively new material to work with this spring. It will require more time to teach the new boys what we wish them to know, so that instead of merely 16 days our spring practice this year probably will last from five to six weeks."

MAX CAREY, former Pirate captain, has been reappointed captain of the Brooklyn team, Manager Robinson announces. When the veteran outfielder is not in the game, Shortstop Dave Bancroft will serve as captain.

NO MATTER whether it is to Cleveland or some other place to which the Pittsburgh hockey club is sent for next season, one member of the combination is not going along. That player is Martin Burke.

Martin Burke.

Even if the Pirates had not been sold, Burke would not have remained here with the team. When the clever defense man was obtained from Les Canadiens in a trade for Charley Langlois, a deal that pulled the local sextet out of a rut, it was probably only a business arrangement to improve conditions in Pittsburgh. In any event, it was agreed that either club should have the right to recall its former player at the end of the season.

Several times since his coming here, Burke has informed friends that he was to go back to the Canadiens next winter, and this was confirmed by officials and members of that team when it played here last Tuesday.

The report that Les Canadiens, in taking Langlois, were aiming to get an all-French team, appears to have been incorrect, for in addition to recalling Burke for next season, the club presented a lineup here this week in which four of the six starters were not French. The great Howie Morenz and Aurel Joliat are of Swiss descent, and Hainsworth and Gardner are Canadians, not to mention Hart and Patterson among the spares.

VIC GETS ULTIMATUM

AUGUSTA, Ga., March 9.—It's sign or fine for Vic Aldridge, holdout Giant pitcher, according to Manager John McGraw of the Giants. McGraw has stated that unless Vic comes to terms within the next two days, he will be sent a new contract with sizeable salary cut.

PIRATES

Carmen will leave the team during the eastward journey to take treatment from Guy Greene, the noted healer of Linesville, Pa.

Miljus still wears a bandage around his abscessed neck. John is sure of expert nursing now, his wife having arrived from Los Angeles.

GRIMES IS INJURED

Grimes was hurt in yesterday's practice. The spit ball star had two finger nails torn back from the flesh in chasing fungoes. One wound is on the pitching hand, the other on the left. Trainer Asten gave the veteran quick attention and it isn't likely that Burleigh will miss any sessions, but he will not be asked to pitch until the sore spots begin to heal.

The epidemic includes Joe Dawson, Fred Fussell, and Regis Leheny, all pitchers; Infielder Dick Bartell and utility man Joe Harris. Dawson has a sore arm, Fussell is recovering from a stomach complaint and Leheny has an abscessed wisdom tooth which took him out of the workout of yesterday afternoon. Bartell has a wrenched knee and Harris is taking precautionary treatment from a slight attack of neuritis.

Treasurer Sam Dreyfuss upon his return from Santa Barbara yesterday, announced the order in which the Pirates were to meet the Seals and Missions of San Francisco in the 11 contests slated for that city.

The schedule follows: March 17, Missions; March 18 (morning) Missions; (afternoon), Seals; March 19, Seals; March 20, Seals; March 21, Seals; March 22, Seals; March 23, Missions; March 24, Missions; March 25, (morning), Seals; (afternoon), Seals.

HARRISON

in office until things were well settled and running smoothly. His duties in connection with the Cathedral of Learning erection have been given as the reason for his resignation.

The only surprise move of the affair is seen in the appointment of Dean Harrison to the post. It was believed by many that in the event of Blakeslee's stepping out that Frank L. (Pie) Williams, the assistant director, would be given the position. Williams is a Pitt graduate, a former gridiron hero and a campus favorite. It was not believed that the university would depart for any length of time from its policy of employing graduate officials.

NO CHANGES EXPECTED

No changes in the athletic policy of the university are anticipated. Harrison came to Pitt in 1923 from Akron University. He has had a varied career, having been a newspaper man, soldier and university executive. He graduated from college in 1916, and held executive positions at University of Iowa, Iowa College and at Akron U. In addition, he was sports editor and reporter on the Des Moines Tribune, Des Moines, Ia.

In 1926, Harrison was offered the position of dean of men at Pitt, which he accepted. Previous to that time he had been student counsellor, having succeeded B. F. Ashe, now president of Miami (Florida) University.

There is little doubt but that the Blakeslee regime, short though it was, bore fruit. Football relations were resumed with Notre Dame after a hiatus of a decade. Basketball relations were extended to include five Western Conference schools and it is very likely that the seed has been planted which will result in Pitt's meeting one of the Big Ten teams on the gridiron within the next two years.

Harrison is popular on the campus and among the students, and his vast experience as an athlete and executive and his personality should insure him a successful career as athletic director.

The tasks ahead of him are stern ones, including the problem of paying for the stadium. He will undoubtedly have the full co-operation of the alumni organization, athletic council and the student body in his work.

Dr. H. C. Carlson will give his unbeaten Pitt Panthers a light workout this afternoon in preparation for the final game of the season, with Penn State at State College tomorrow.

The Panthers, following their hectic struggle with Wash-Jeff Tuesday, were ordered to rest until today. The team is in good shape, with the exception of Chipper Charlie Hyatt, who is suffering with an abscessed tooth.

Bosses' Life Not All Roses; Harder to Make Ends Meet

By B. C. FORBES

UNEMPLOYED are not the only people who have troubles—although few misfortunes are more disheartening than enforced idleness.

Many, many workers have the notion that all employers lead a happy, carefree, prosperous life.

The naked truth is that two in every five manufacturing companies have in recent years either made no profits or have suffered losses.

Also it is the stark truth that bankruptcies are increasing, so difficult has it become in many, not to say most lines, to make reasonable profit.

ANOTHER thing. The number of million-dollar to billion-dollar corporations is increasing each year, driving to the wall more and more small concerns. And this trend is certain to be more pronounced during 1928 than ever before.

THE fact is that the ordinary man engaged in business on a small or moderate scale is finding his life less and less a bed of roses. Competition from larger concerns steadily becomes more aggressive, more killing.

On the other hand, it is indisputable that an increasing number of employes are able to enjoy higher standards of living than formerly and also to save money, acquire their own homes, subscribe either for stock in their employing company or other investments, spend more liberally for education of their families, etc.

Could the whole truth be ascertained, the strong probability is that it would be found that a larger percentage of steadily employed workers, taking one grade and one class with another, have fewer financial worries and more happiness than is the case among those doing business on their own account.

DURING 1927 Dun's records the staggering total of 23,146 commercial failures, against 21,773 in 1926, 21,214 in 1925, 20,615 in 1924 and 18,718 in 1923.

That gives you some idea of how common very grave financial difficulties are among bosses, those owning their own business or being part owners of a business.

STILL more impressive are the figures showing the number of concerns that have been unable during recent years to make ends meet.

A thorough-going analysis, by the research staff of the national industrial conference board, of the income tax returns to the federal government, reveals that the following percentages of manufacturing corporations reported no net income: In 1920, 27 per cent; in 1921, 54 per cent; in 1922, 41 per cent; in 1923, 37 per cent; in 1924, 41 per cent; in 1925, 39 per cent.

When the 1927 figures become available, they are certain to disclose a more unfavorable rather than a more favorable comparison.

During the six years covered, the records show that for every $100 earned by successful concerns, no less than $32 was lost by unsuccessful concerns.

PRESIDENT MAGNUS W. ALEXANDER, of the National Industrial Conference Board, states:

"In the case of incorporation figures, the trend since the end of 1925 has been downward, and the decline has been sharp. Comparison of the trends of failures and incorporation in business in recent years justifies the deduction that competitive conditions in business are becoming more severe."

After remarking that, "although 1925 was generally considered a 'banner year' for business," Mr. Alexander observes:

"The board's analysis further shows that manufacturing operations in 1925 not only operated on a distinctly narrower profit margin per dollar of sales than in 1923, the last previous 'good' year, but that the average net income of 99.89 per cent of them—that is, all those with less than $5,000,000 net income in the year 1925—was nearly 11 per cent smaller than in 1923.

"While in 1923, $6.07 out of every $100 of the aggregate receipts of all manufacturing corporations represented net profit, in 1925 a considerably larger volume of goods was produced at a profit of only $5.85 out of every $100 of receipts."

VERILY, each heart knoweth only its own bitterness.

G. M. HITS 6TH CONSECUTIVE HIGH

NEW YORK, March 9.—(AP.)—Establishing a new high record for the sixth consecutive session, General Motors common, with another sensational gain of more than 8 points at 157, led another spirited advance in today's stock market. Early gains in some of the high-priced specialties ran from 3 to 16 points, with at least 30 issues at new high levels for the year or longer. Trading was conducted at a terrific pace, with indications that the day's sales would run around 3,000,000 shares.

The buying movement was based on two important developments, the unexpected decrease of more than $26,000,000 in brokers' loans and the announcement that General Motors executives, through their securities corporation, had purchased a block of 200,000 shares of General Motors common for approximately $30,000,000 in cash, or about $150 a share. "Bears," who sold stocks short on the theory that loans would show a sizeable increase, beat an urgent retreat, while small speculators followed the lead of General Motors executives in purchasing more of the corporation's stock.

Midland Steel Products preferred soared 16 points, National Tea 9½, Dupont 8, Baldwin and Radio 7½ each and Commercial Solvents 3½, all but the first-named touching new high prices. A variety of other issues reached new high ground, including Hudson Motors, Commonwealth Power, International Cement, Famous Players, Corn Products, Victor Talking Machine, Butterick Publishing, American Can, Sinclair and Union Oil of California.

With the exception of St. Louis-San Francisco, which advanced 2 point to around the year's high level, the rails did not participate in the upward movement. Buying of this group has been held in check by the disappointing traffic and earnings reports for the first few months of the year.

FINANCIAL NEWS AND VIEWS

Loans Down $26,175,000.

A decrease of $26,175,000 in brokers' loans, reducing the total to $3,695,709,000 as of March 7, was announced by the Federal Reserve Board. Loans by New York banks for their own account were cut down to $130,000,000, but most of this was offset by increases in loans for account of out-of-town banks and for non-banking lenders. The high for 1928 was $3,835,920,000, made on February 8, and the low March 7. The high for 1927 was $3,717,622,000 on December 28, and the low $2,717,634,000 on February 16. The high for 1926 was made January 6 and was $3,141,125,000, and low $2,405,695,000 on May 19.

Trend of Re-Discount Rates.

Wall Street is disposed to look upon the remarks of Governor Young of the Federal Reserve Board in a bullish light, since the statement made by this authority was that the next movement in rediscount rates would probably be toward lower levels in the East and since he further implied that the monetary requirements of business and agriculture were not in any sense restricted by the growth in brokers' loans.

Drop Surprises Street.

The decrease in loans was a distinct surprise to the stock market community. One explanation for the decline was in a report that the DuPont interests had taken a block of General Motors, purchased recently, out of the market. Such procedure would permit of financing out of town that would not appear in the brokers' loan report issued yesterday. However, to permit of the decline of $26,00,000 in loans reported there must have been considerable liquidation indulged in under cover of the recent strength in Motors. The Reserve Bank's statement strengthened belief that open market operations will be held off pending completion of the treasury financing as only $5,000,000 government securities were sold during the week.

Federal Reserve Position.

The consolidated statement of condition of the Federal Reserve Banks on March 7, made public by the Federal Reserve Board, shows decreases of $19,500,000 in holdings of discounted bills, of $5,300,000 in bills bought in open market, of $1,900,000 in United States securities, and of $12,100,000 in member bank reserve deposits, and increases of $3,100,000 in Federal Reserve note circulation and $1,400,000 in cash reserves. Total bills and securities were $26,600,000 below the amount held on February 29. The principal changes in holdings of discounted bills were an increase of $11,100,000 at the Federal Reserve Bank of New York, and decreases of $11,400,000 at Philadelphia, $12,400,000 at Cleveland, and $9,500,00 at Boston. The system's holdings of bills bought in open market decreased $5,300,000, of certificates of indebtedness $5,900,000, and of treasury notes $400,000, while holdings of United States bonds were $1,400,00 above the previous week's total.

Sinclair-Marland Rumors.

Wall Street is discussing disposition of control of the Sinclair Consolidated Oil Corporation and there is general agreement that something is in the wind which will terminate with a change in control. Concentrated buying of the stock gave strength to such reports and when it was learned that Loew and Company were the largest buyers the feeling grew that Sinclair may eventually turn up under Morgan control. In this connection, it was stated that Marland would form a very logical companion for Sinclair in a merger. In such event, it is unanimously predicted, the name of Sinclair would be dropped. It is a peculiar coincidence that there have been many rumors recently of important changes in the executive make-up of both the Sinclair and Marland companies. Such a deal would involve assets approaching a total of $500,000,000.

If these Debentures are called for redemption prior to March 1, 1930, or before such earlier date for the exercise of Warrants as aforesaid, the holders of the Warrants thereto attached will be entitled to receive this Common Stock in the said ratio at the time the Debentures are redeemed.

The Union National Bank of Pittsburgh, Trustee

The following information has been summarized by Mr. Eugene C. Eppley, President of Pittsburgh Hotels Corporation from his letter dated March 8, 1928, copies of which may be obtained upon request, and is subject to the more complete information contained therein:

Company: Pittsburgh Hotels Corporation, a Pennsylvania corporation, will own in fee the two largest fireproof hotels in the City of Pittsburgh, Pa., namely, William Penn and Fort Pitt Hotels, and also the Fort Pitt Service Building, which have heretofore been owned by the Pittsburgh Hotels Company and Iron City Improvement Company. The two hotels, upon completion of addition to the William Penn Hotel of 586 guests rooms, now under construction, will contain in all 2,132 rooms, as well as banquet rooms, dining rooms and rest rooms, all designed for the comfort and convenience of guests. Both hotels are in close proximity to railway stations and the business center of the city. Pittsburgh, with an estimated population of 671,563, at present has but 3,094 hotel guest rooms available for the public in the downtown section.

Earnings: The average annual combined net income of the properties for the five-year period ended December 31, 1927, available for interest, depreciation and Federal Income Taxes, as certified by Messrs. Peat, Marwick, Mitchell & Co., Auditors, was $1,117,056, or over 2.87 times the annual interest requirements on these Debentures, after allowing for maximum annual interest requirements on the two series of Mortgage Bonds presently to be outstanding.

For the year 1927 the combined repairs and maintenance charges were $281,427.78, compared with an average of the four previous years of $185,165.98. This increase is due primarily to extensive interior redecorating at Fort Pitt Hotel. In spite of these extraordinary charges to operations, the combined net income, as above, of both hotels, for the year 1927, as certified by the same Auditors, was $906,157. The number of rooms now under construction in the addition to the William Penn Hotel amounts to 38% of the present combined total number of guest rooms in the William Penn and Fort Pitt Hotels. It is anticipated that the addition will be completed by January 1, 1929, but it is expected there will be a partial occupancy of the addition by October, 1928.

Messrs. Horwath & Horwath, specialists in hotel accounting, estimate that upon completion of the addition to the William Penn Hotel, comprising 586 rooms, now under construction, the net income for a normal year's operation, available for interest, depreciation and Federal Income Taxes, will amount to $1,840,551, which, after deduction of maximum annual Mortgage interest and sinking fund requirements is equivalent to 2.8 times annual interest and sinking fund requirements on these Debentures. Their estimate is based on room revenue in the William Penn Hotel with 65% occupancy in the present building, 46% in the addition, and 75% in the Fort Pitt Hotel.

Security: These Debentures, in the opinion of counsel, will be the direct obligation of Pittsburgh Hotels Corporation and will be subject only to the two series of Mortgage Bonds presently to be outstanding. The valuation of the land and buildings including the new addition, as appraised by the Real Estate Board of Pittsburgh, plus equipment, as appraised and/or estimated by M. H. Pickering Company of Pittsburgh, is $19,272,593. Based on appraisal of land and buildings by C. C. McKallip & Co. of Pittsburgh, plus equipment as appraised and/or estimated by M. H. Pickering Company, the total valuation is $20,096,694. Based on the lower appraisal, the total valuation is equivalent to over $3,000 for each $1,000 Debenture to be outstanding, after deducting the two series of Mortgage Bonds.

Sinking Fund: The Indenture will provide for a Sinking Fund, payable semi-annually commencing September 1, 1930, calculated to retire about two-thirds of these Debentures by maturity.

Purpose of Issue: The proceeds of this issue, together with the proceeds of the two series of Mortgage Bonds, will all be used to pay part of the cost of acquiring the properties of the predecessor companies and of completing and furnishing the addition to the William Penn Hotel.

Management: Mr. Eugene C. Eppley has contracted to act as President of the Corporation and to manage its property, assisted by the organization of the Eppley Hotels Company. This organization has successfully built up and operated a chain of sixteen hotels centering around the Fontenelle Hotel of Omaha, Nebraska, and has within the last year acquired the Alexandria Hotel at Los Angeles, which it is now operating with marked success. It is anticipated that the Eppley management will achieve the same commendable results in the operation of William Penn and Fort Pitt Hotels as has resulted from its operations of other hotels under its control.

We offer these Debentures if, when and as issued and accepted by us, and subject to approval of legal proceedings by counsel. Legal proceedings will be passed upon by S. Stanwood Menken, Esq., New York City, Messrs. Moorhead & Knox, Pittsburgh, and Messrs. Venable, Baetjer and Howard, Baltimore, for the undersigned, and by Messrs. Thorp, Bostwick, Stewart & Reed and Messrs. Reed, Smith, Shaw and McClay, both of Pittsburgh, for the Pittsburgh Hotels Company (predecessor of Pittsburgh Hotels Corporation). It is expected that delivery will be made, in the form of temporary Debentures or Trust Company interim receipts, on or about April 6, 1928.

These securities are offered on express condition that no statements above constitute any representation, guaranty or warranty by us.

MACHINE COM. IN DEMAND

Carnegie Metals started off with a rush at the opening of the Pittsburgh Stock Exchange today, when more than 3,000 shares of the stock changed hands between 26½ and 27½, the latter a new high record for the issue.

Other stocks were crowded out of the market by Carnegie, which furnished the only fireworks witnessed in the local trading arena this week. The current spurt in the stock has no explanation in trading circles here other than the previous stories of increased earnings expected to be shown this year and possibilities arising out of the reported intention of the company to reopen its mine at Cananea, Mexico. These holdings were abandoned some time ago, but Carnegie interests are said to be considering another try at the mine on the strength of the big ore strike reported to have been made by Greene Cananea Copper Company on property the latter owns in that territory.

First sale of Carnegie was at 27, up ¼ from its previous record price, after which it sagged back a fraction and bobbed along between 26½ and 27½ the remainder of the forenoon session.

Reports of further improvement in the glass industry was reflected in a sharp advance in American Window Glass Machine Company preferred. Bids for the stock were lifted five points above the last previous sale price before any of the shares came out. Standard Plate prior preferred was off a point here while the common and preferred were steady in the New York market.

United Engineering and Foundry was firm and Standard Sanitary held close to yesterday's final figure. Fuels were dull.

IS IT ANYTHING SERIOUS? DID YOU DECIDE WHAT IS EXACTLY WRONG WITH HIM?
MALINGERITIS. A CONDITION THAT OFTEN FOLLOWS A SEVERE SHOCK. MAKE THE PATIENT AS COMFORTABLE AS POSSIBLE. BE CHEERFUL IN HIS PRESENCE, AND GIVE HIM TWO OF THE SMALL PILLS EVERY HOUR AND ONE OF THE LARGE PILLS EVERY TWO HOURS.
WELL, GENTLEMEN, THERE HAS BEEN AN EXTREME DIFFERENCE OF OPINION BETWEEN US IN THIS CASE, WHICH I WILL ADMIT I HAVE ACCEPTED AS A COMPLIMENT TO MY YEARS OF — GENTLEMEN, I AM VERY GLAD TO BID BOTH OF YOU GOODBYE!
FRANKLY GENTLEMEN I FEEL JUST AS YOU DO ABOUT THIS MESS.
MALINGERITIS! WHAT A DISTINCTIVE NAME FOR A DISEASE.
MALINGERITIS! I NEVER HEARD OF IT. IT MUST BE VERY RARE, ONE CASE IN A MILLION, I SUPPOSE. IT SOUNDS AS THOUGH IT WAS MERELY THE NAME OF SOMETHING BOTTLED IN EUROPE. WELL I'D JUST AS SOON HAVE A DISEASE LIKE THAT AS, SAY MUMPS, OR SOME OTHER COMMON DISEASE.

BUGS BAER Says

HAVE you bought your six-tube, reflex, double-action kitchen stove yet?

The General Electric is now cooking by radio.

Old Doc Whitney, who is afraid to leave Schenectady because he can't pronounce it when people ask him where he lives, says the high frequency vacuum tube is a success.

ARTHUR "BUGS" BAER

Sausages and scrapple were electrocuted by buzzing ohms transmitted through space.

Four million volts without a permanent address were catapulted through a haystack and put a nice pie crust on a book of postage stamps in a hobo's vest.

The bum happened to be sleeping in the haystack and didn't realize that he had joined the Rockefeller Foundation until his whiskers started throwing off sparks.

This presumptuous invention will complicate housekeeping in two-family garages. No man wants to wander across the firing range when the cook is throwing thunderbolts in an insulated plate of waffles.

Outside of getting a New England boiled dinner out of a mail order catalogue, we can visualize nothing more startling than looking in a loud speaker and getting slapped in the face with a broadcastated finnan haddie, smothered in tartar sauce.

We trust that the General Electric does not commercialize this latest boon to the comfort of man and his creditors.

Special radio hours have their attraction, but we do not want to hear singing noodles dying through the air.

Doc Whitney actually cooked an egg that was parked in a hermetically sealed high hat and suspended by a wire from the chandelier of a sound-proof car foundry.

One flip of the switch was enough to shock the egg into a state of coma.

It would have been economical housework if the same shock hadn't assassinated 14 hens and burned the pants off the farmer.

Science is a tough man to shave. Doc Whitney wouldn't be the first martyr who went forth with a bridle in his hand to harness Niagara and wound up by getting kicked in the chin by a mule.

Radio cookery is still an experiment. While shocking a hard-boiled egg is a social achievement, you are just as liable to turn the power on a Virginia boiled ham in Norfolk and find yourself up in Vermont with a handful of animal crackers.

Better No Navy Than One Useless for Protection

Since history began, there has never been such a gesture of generosity as the United States made at the Washington conference on the limitation of armaments when it voluntarily surrendered first place on the sea to accept naval parity with Great Britain.

A good many Americans, the owner of this newspaper among them, while friendly to Great Britain and eager to see the English-speaking peoples co-operate for peace, thought then and still think that the gesture went too far.

But parity is the very LEAST that the richest and industrially foremost nation in the world can accept in self-respect or safety.

Unfortunately, the naval committee of the present Congress lacks backbone to stand even for that.

It has swallowed its convictions and reported a program which would place our country FAR IN THE REAR as a naval power.

Representative Loring M. Black is right in believing that an inferior navy is a ridiculous extravagance.

It is useless for protection. Better have all the benefit in economy by having no navy than to make futile the expenditure on one which is not strong enough to meet the national needs.

Only a part of American opinion has registered on this subject. That part which takes its teaching from the lessons of experience has yet to be heard from.

Good for the Public

The largest radio hookup, reaching half the American public, promises to spend $8,000,000 on programs this year.

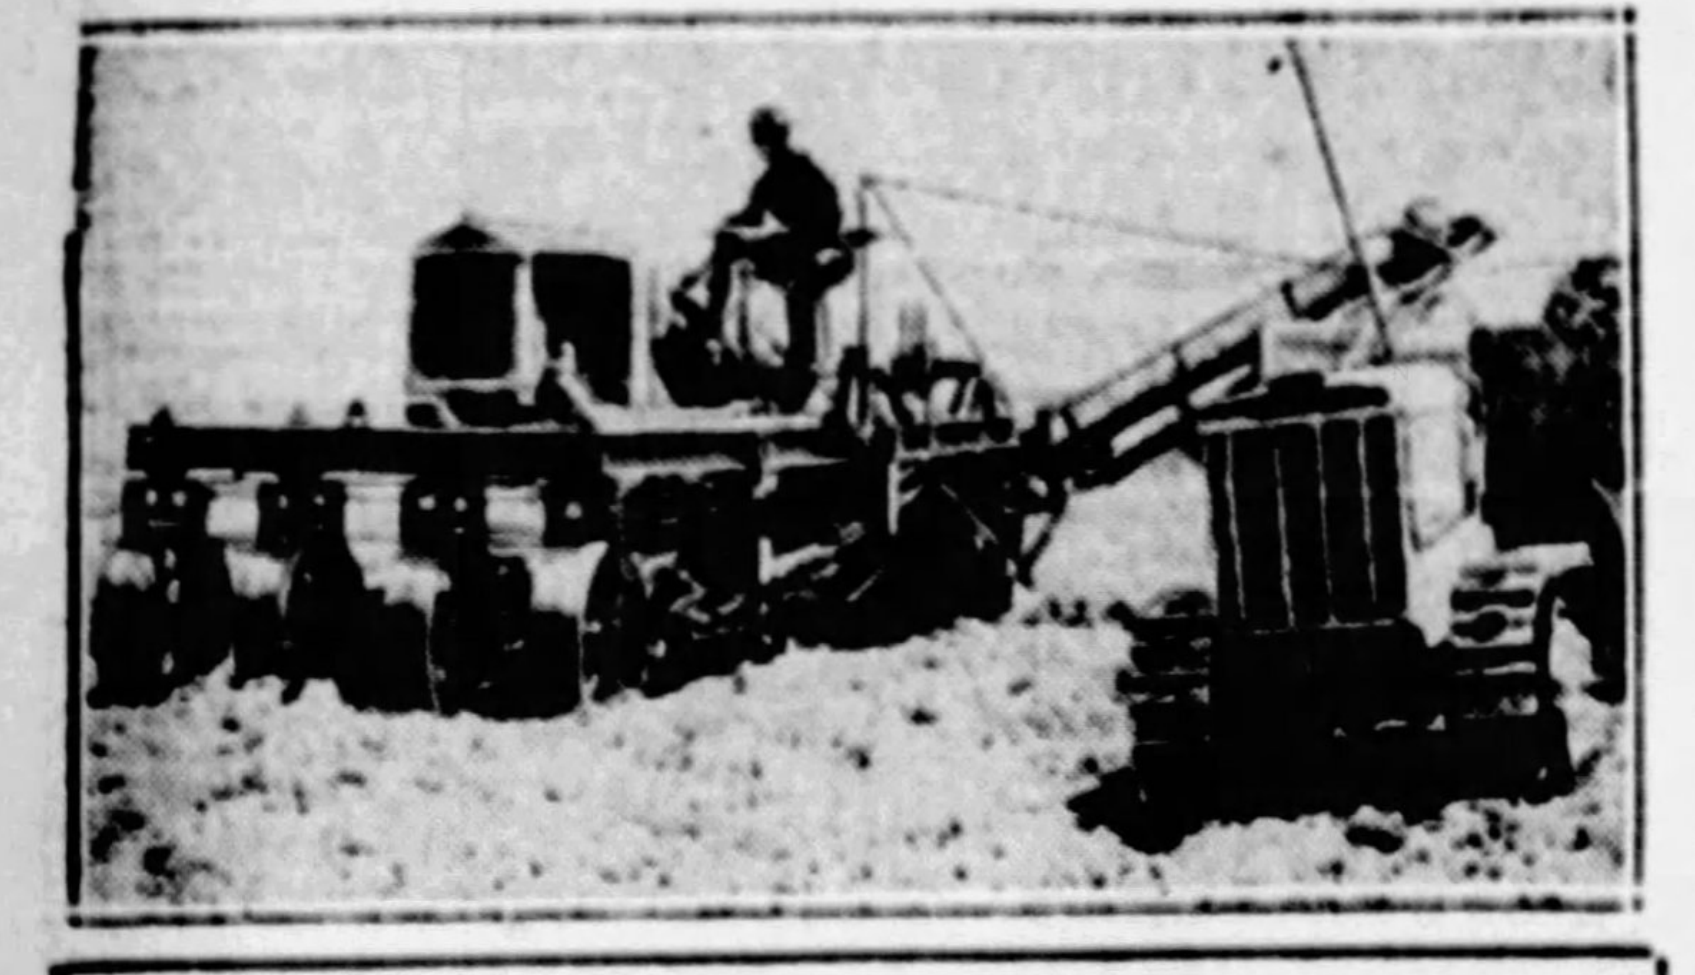
Now, suppose that chain broadcasting were banned, as certain members of the Congress suggest.

Fifty-five stations would have to arrange 55 sets of programs, none of which could be expected to equal in quality those now supplied. The money cost might be greater, but the public enjoyment and cultural benefit would almost certainly be less.

The evils in radio "monopoly" are largely fanciful. The benefits in co-operation are substantial. A practical people will prefer substance to shadow.

Two Men Do 60 Men's Work

This Potato Digger Predicts the Future.



DIGGING POTATOES, WITH TWO MEN DOING THE WORK OF SIXTY MEN.

Study this machine, if you are interested in the future and in prosperity. It tells the story of what IS TO BE.

This giant labor saving potato digger was invented and built by Zuckerman Brothers for their potato ranch at Stockton, California.

On the left, moving along slowly, is the digger, digging three rows of potatoes at a time. That is heavy digging, for Zuckerman Brothers grow the heaviest crops of potatoes produced anywhere.

As the potatoes are dug they move up through a spout and are delivered to a wagon hauled behind a smaller tractor, on the right.

One man drives the potato digger, one drives the tractor that hauls the wagon and potatoes.

In the old way, even with comparatively modern agricultural tools, it would take sixty men to do the work done by these two men.

Thus a well planned machine, plus a little gasoline, saves the labor of fifty-eight men and makes possible farming on a gigantic scale and a PROFITABLE scale.

The problem of farmers is the problem of the country. They feed the nation and are the basis of prosperity. Wealth they produce, running into billions every year, enriches the country, but leaves the farmers as a rule poor and dissatisfied from year to year.

The trouble is that the farmer's work has not been organized as industry has been organized.

The farmer works his farm as the wagon builder used to make his wagons in the old days.

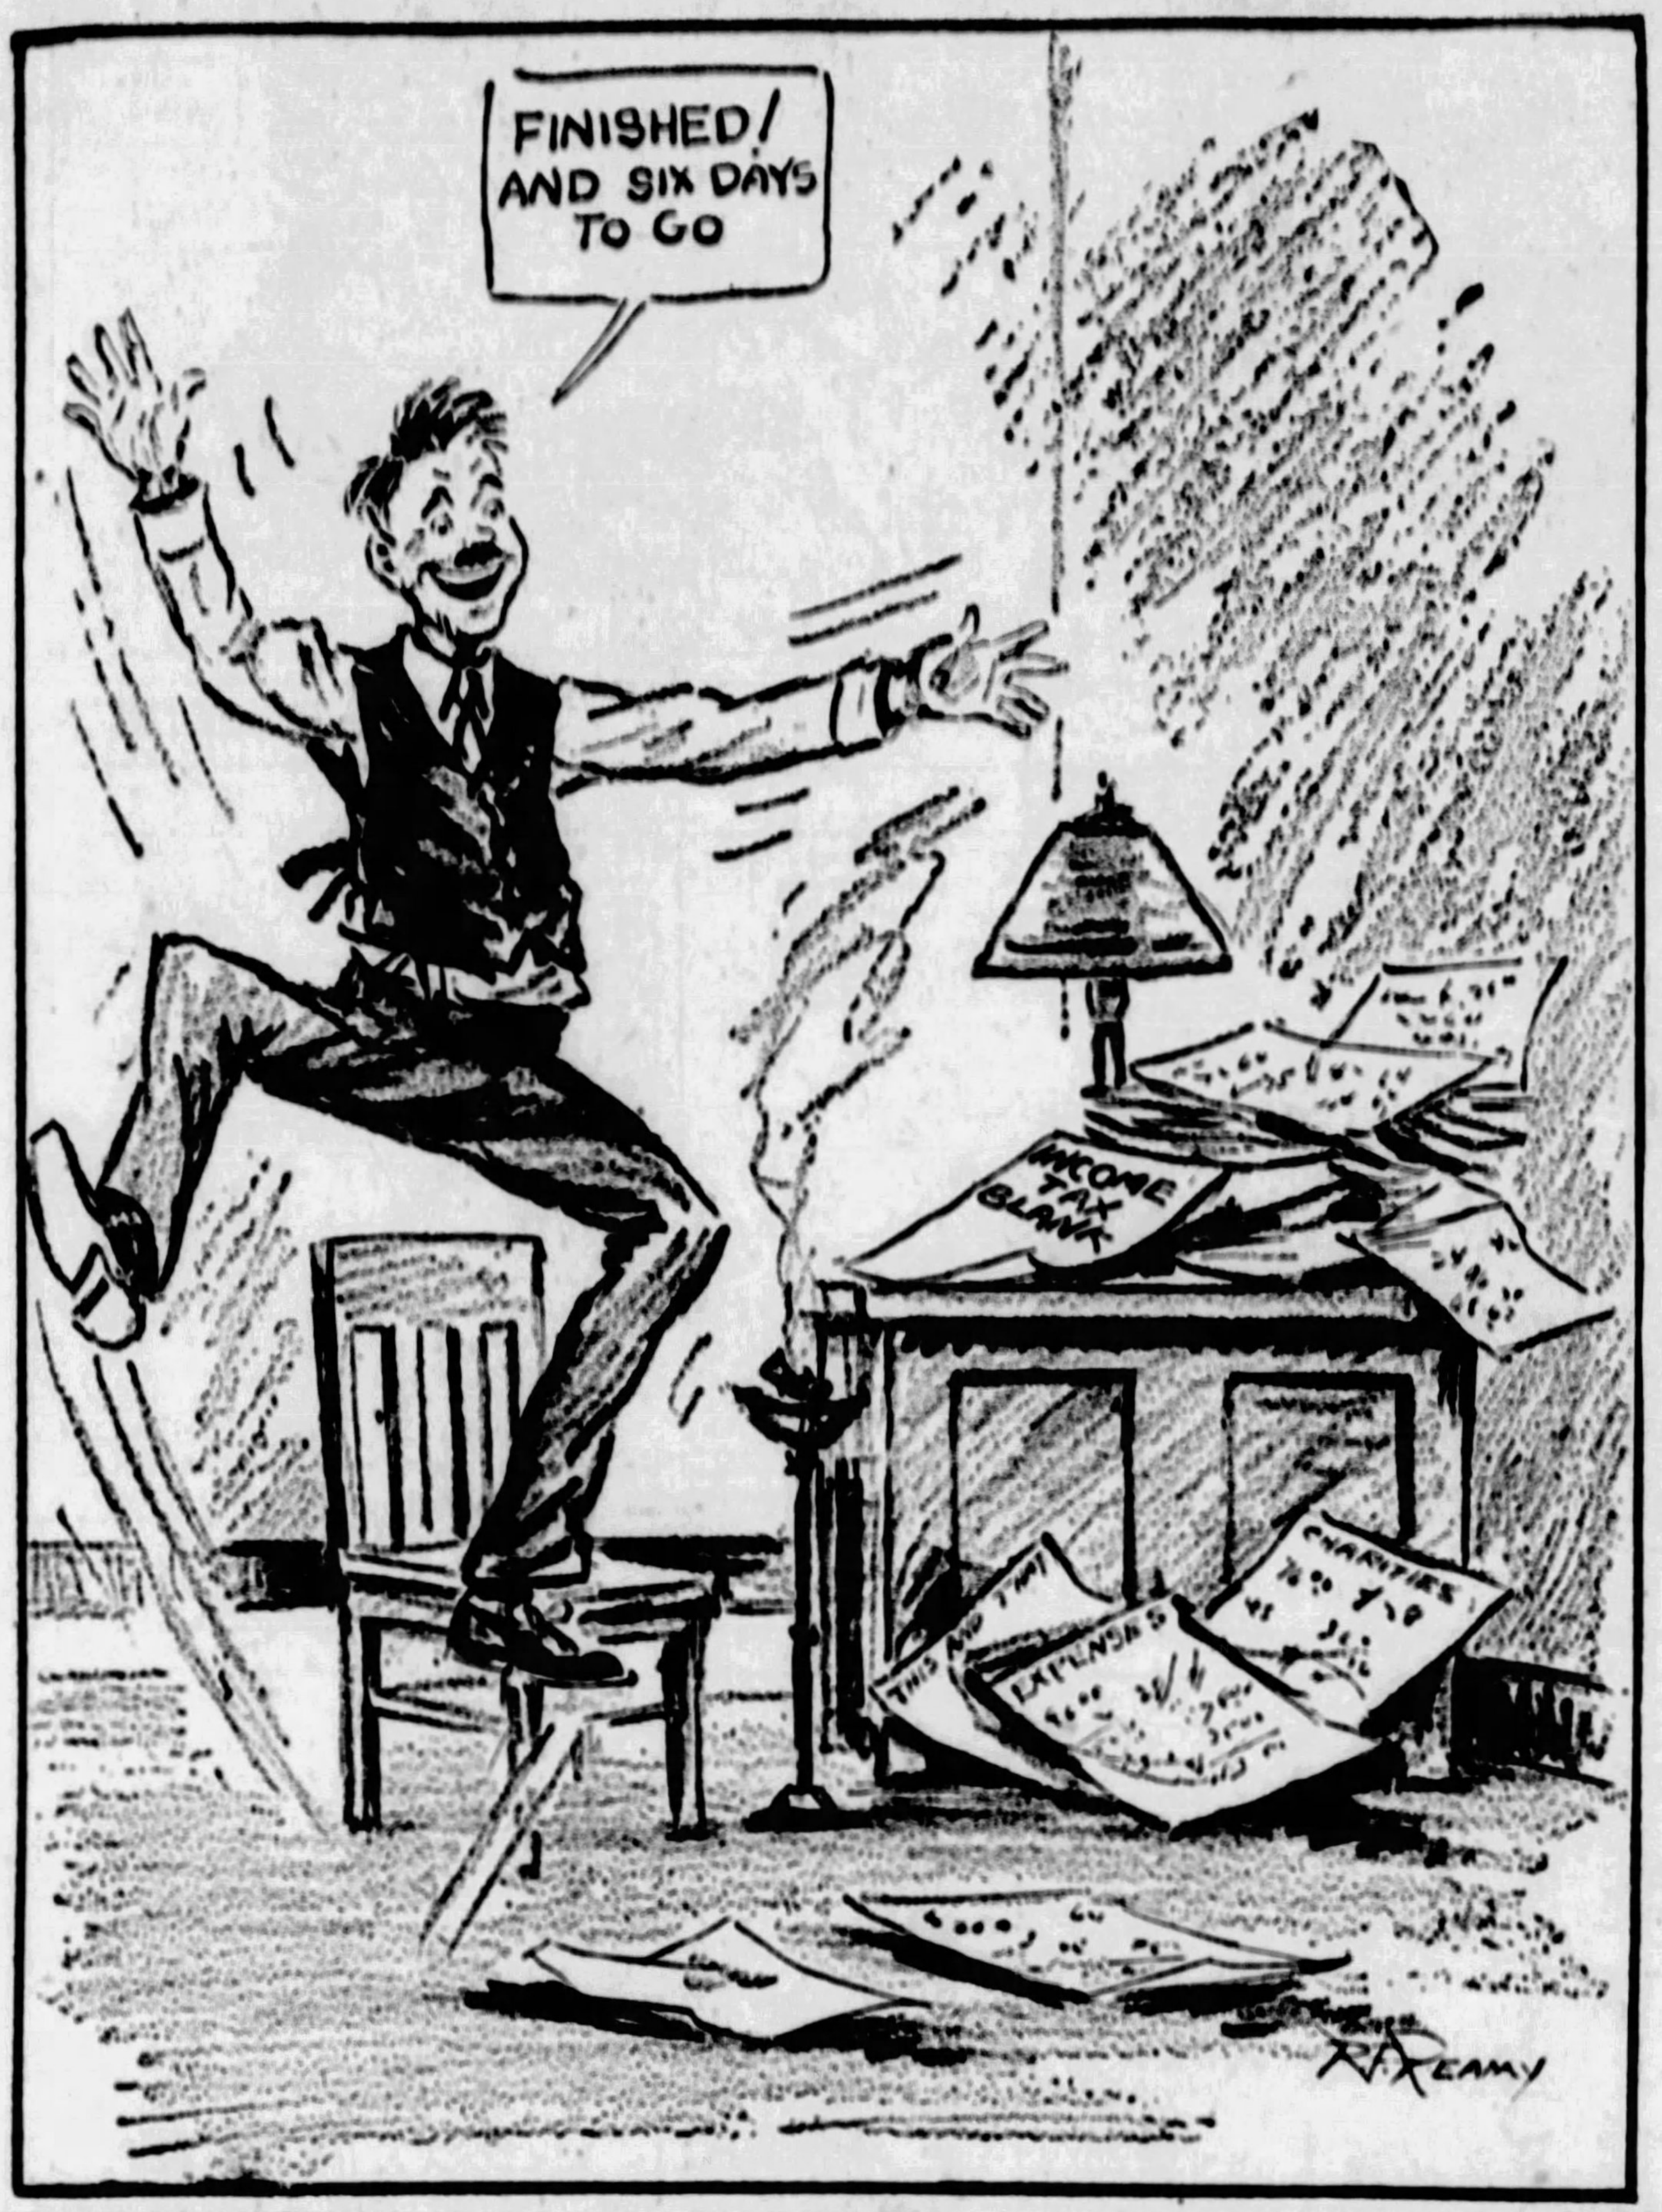
The new wagon, the new automobile, comes along off "the line," thousands in a day, with modern methods. But farming goes on in the old way.

It is a fact that a modern agricultural machine used in old-fashioned farming gets more wear from rust than it does from use.

The head of the International Harvester Company will tell you that the life of a machine, if cared for and parts replaced, should give years of work, yet it only gets on the average a few weeks of service. The farmer uses it a week, a little more, a little less, and puts it away to wait another year, and often leaves it standing out of doors.

This picture shows that farming problems CAN be solved with modern industrial methods applied to farms, and for those that THINK it is a most interesting and important picture.

Is EVERYBODY Happy?



Garrett P. Serviss Says:

Fate

"Would appreciate an article on this! A claims that every person is destined to die in a certain manner and a certain place, at a certain time. He points out that a person is not killed in passing through a hazardous experience because his time has not come. B contends that the manner and time of one's death are governed mainly by the law of cause and effect, and that one man lives while another dies in the same experience because the conditions were not identically the same for both.—C. J. Y."

A'S FATALISTIC views leave no room for reasoning about cause and effect. Most of the fanaticism that curses the world arises from a similar source.

A British officer once gave me a most vivid account of the effects of fatalism in a battle with a native tribe in Southwest Africa. The naked warriors with their rude spears came on in ceaseless waves against his well-armed, strongly-entrenched soldiers, showing absolute indifference to death, climbing over the bodies of their fallen fellows, eager only to kill, with no fear of being killed, until their superhuman recklessness of death and wild fury of bloodshed struck a chill to the hearts of the defenders.

The savages fought that way because they believed that fate held them in his hand, that nothing that they could do would either attract or repel death, and that through death they would pass straight to Paradise.

Some may find an argument for fatalism in that it emancipates from fear and from anxiety. But it makes life and the universe a fraud on human hopes and aspirations. Although we are governed by cause and effect, we are subject to what we can only describe as chance because of our imperfect knowledge. Nevertheless, within our limits we can control chance. We can load the dice in our own favor. As soon as we understand a cause we can vary the effect of it. We almost enter into partnership with the Fates, and may even play the part of one or the other of the three.

"Spin, spin, Clotho spin, Lechesis twist, and Atropos sever."

The complication of simultaneous causes acting in nature and life is so great that we can hardly hope that man will ever understand more than a very few of them. Yet I do not believe that our agency in our own destinies is excluded. While I am writing the big, clammy flakes of a February snowstorm are whirling against a balcony outside my window. They come on in white streams, all apparently destined to the same end, yet though many are splattered to melt against the woodwork, a few, caught at the last instant in the salvation curve of some invisible slant of air, sail gaily away to cavort in the free atmosphere while their comrades perish.

The chain of causes producing these different results is concealed from us, but can we doubt its existence? But "cause" is not "fate" or "destiny" here any more than it is on the battlefield, or in an accident, where some of those subject to injury escape and others do not. And when human will and purpose are added to the unforeseeable turns of chance there is still less room for fate. The bullet does not fly at random, it is aimed. The more observant, the quicker-witted, the less excitable person in a railroad or auto smash may save his life where another, not possessing those qualities, would lose it.

One should avoid too much dogmatism on this subject; it is too full of unexplored mystery. Humanity touches it in strange ways. I recall a story from Carl Schurz's "Reminiscences" that is somewhat apropos.

In a battle at Chattanooga Schurz, then a Union general, heard as the battle opened an inner voice telling him: "Today you will be killed." For hours this haunted him and he could not shake off a feeling of depression. Suddenly, while sitting on his horse, with his staff near by, he saw a cannon ball coming through the trees straight toward him. But it passed between the legs of his horse, broke the leg of a horse behind him and spent its force against a bank of earth. Then the voice said to him: "This was the one, but it didn't kill you, after all," and immediately the oppressive gloom fell from his spirit. Did fate change its mind? And what niche in psychology does this incident occupy?

Fooling Yourself

WHAT sort of person are you when you are traveling?

Grouchy, snappy and discourteous?

Little things annoy you and you grumble to your seat-mate, to the conductor, to the porter, to anyone who will listen.

You are prone to criticize the train employes for inattention, for little imaginary discourtesies.

Your fellow travelers who try to be affable and kind are treated to a recital of your grievances.

You really want to appear superior to those traveling with you.

While it is likely that you are not much, if any, above the majority who surround you.

Perhaps you have a little more money than education.

But if your money makes you look down upon the general run of those you meet while traveling, you are very poor indeed.

You are not only not worth knowing, but you are failing to get enjoyment out of association with humanity that might be valuable to you.

Tales That Are Told

Push

A MAN of well-fed appearance was lecturing to a village audience on "The Art of Getting On." He lectured hard for about an hour, and finally concluded with the fine peroration: "The successful man is the man who strives persistently. His motto is, 'Push and keep pushing;' by that means alone does he reach his goal."

Applause hung fire, and a small man at the back of the hall laughed loudly.

The lecturer held up his hand.

"You, too, my friend, will have to push—" he began.

"So will you," interrupted the small man; "there's half-a-dozen youngsters been pinching the petrol out of your motor to light a bonfire, and there's no petrol in the village."—London Tit Bits.

Her Complaint

THE pretty girl traveling with her stern-looking father was evidently not in the best of health. Her cheeks were pale, and she looked very frail.

A kind—if inquisitive—passenger sitting opposite leaned forward and spoke to the stern parent.

"Your daughter looks very ill," he remarked, sympathetically.

"Yes," replied the father, "It's an affection of the heart."

"Dear me! Aneurism?"

"Oh, no! Only a subaltern in the Army."

Surprising

HE was playing a very indifferent game of golf. For the third time that afternoon he had fozzled his shot.

Turning to the caddie, he remarked:

"I think I'm off my game today."

"Havens," said the caddie, "has ye played before?"

O. O. McINTYRE

In Gay Paree

PARIS, March 9.—France needs to learn more than any civilized country the one thing it will not accept, and that is discipline. If a gendarme would be foolish enough, for instance, to order a sidewalk crowd to move on, he would get a tongue lashing that would send him back to gendarming "toot sweet."

The citizens of France glory in the belief all public property belongs to them. It is inherent. There are few "Keep Off the Grass" signs. They picnic and play in the public parks and dance in the streets and kick football in Place de la Concorde.

Strictly speaking, there are no auto speed laws or traffic regulations and chauffeurs will harangue the police if they feel any sense of restriction. You cross the street when you want to and not at a police signal. Tyranny had its sequel in the bloody revolution, and the ruling class has always that frightful picture before them and are cautious.

The French have a saying: "Plus que ca change, plus c'est la meme chose"—the more it changes, the more it is the same thing. That is largely responsible for the fact France never changes; that it offers no new laws and its architecture and customs are the same.

All these liberties are accepted as freedom, when, as a matter of fact, they slow up national progress. They breed indolence—a love of play—and the false sense life is a continuous holiday. A drunken man is rarely molested on the street. Nor is he laughed at. After all drinking is a serious business here.

If he falls in the gutter he is taken to a police station, but is not locked up. He is merely stretched out on a bench to sleep off his jag, and is released. It is amusing to watch the dilatory efforts of a French workman. He does not seem to work at all. He merely putters.

I watched a painter today in a dressmaking salon for an hour. He smoked a cigaret, listened to the ladies chatter, winked at a mannekin or so, stood off and gazed at the doorsill he was painting quizzically, felt of the wood, went to the window to watch a parade and in all of that time did not wield his brush for more than three strokes. I would like to hire out as his helper.

If an ordinary disturbance takes place in a cafe or bistro a gendarme will not interfere unless called upon. He would be offering offense to the proprietor and should he be called in he will make an arrest only upon request of the owner.

* * *

On the other hand, the sentimentalities of France are heartening. The tiny newspaper and tobacco stands dotting the boulevards are conducted only by widows of French army officers. They are valuable concessions, and are handed down from one generation to another. These grants cannot be secured by political favor, and offer economic independence to those who receive them.

* * *

The funny little birdcage elevators are manned almost entirely by wounded veterans of the World War. Due to the custom of tipping elevator operators, these posts are prized. Carriage starters are also drawn from the same source. The starter in front of the great Cartier jewelry establishment on the Rue de la Paix has a false arm, a glass eye and walks with a limp.

An American gentleman limping with a touch of gout or rheumatism finds compensation here in deference shown him in public places. France goes on the theory physical difficulties are war wounds, and pays them the customary respect. Anyone may acquire a good set of housemaid's knees, bumping them against the chin in a collapsible taxi seat, and use them for hero purposes.

* * *

A familiar cry in Paris is the "Hui!"—meaning "Get up!"—of the teamsters. It has the peculiar intonation of the pig caller. The drivers are kind to their horses and never use whips, but yell at them incessantly.

Art for the Masses

By DR. FRANK CRANE.

Art is coming under the influence of democracy.

In former times the great artists painted pictures only for churches and rich men's palaces.

Statuary was intended to adorn royal courts and the mansions of the opulent and the private parks of the nobles.

Nowadays statues are being erected in public places where even the most humble and obscure person may admire them. Pictures are hung in museums which have their free days when the public is generously invited.

It is said that Michelangelo and Raphael and the other artists of that time generally painted only saints or archbishops. Gradually artists discovered that the common life of the people contained subjects quite as interesting and picturesque as the lives of the more favored.

In literature Dickens made quite an innovation when he turned his pen toward the obscure and lowly.

We all want to be rich, of course, and famous, but rich men are not as interesting as they used to be. The most noted monuments to the heroes of the late war were those to the unknown soldier. It was a war won, by the way, by the heroism of the common recruit and not by the startling genius of some Napoleon.

It is a question whether a rich man should build himself a fine house, from the windows of which he can only look out upon the abodes of the poor, or build better houses for the poor that he may regard them from his windows.

Men of wealth are gradually turning their attention toward replacing the slums by better habitations.

Altogether it looks as if art, if it is to have a firm foundation, must rest upon the basis of the despised demos.

It is the fashion of the intellectuals to deride the public and to think that only a few chosen ones can appreciate or be benefited by works of art.

The newest invasion into the ranks of art, if it can be called an art, is the motion picture. This is the most diffusive of all arts. It gives to the least and lowest and provides him entertainment which heretofore was for those only who could pay from a dollar up for a seat at the theaters.

For this reason it appears that the moving picture industry, resting as it does upon the appreciation of the whole public, is firmly settled and is in line with democracy.

OH, THESE WOMEN!

By LEOLA ALLARD.

BOBBY KIRSCH, pretty entertainer, sues a millionaire's son for $25,000 for punching her and throwing her down stairs at a party. What a party that must have been! Bobby is just a poor girl who went there to earn $10 as an entertainer, and she gets thrown down stairs by a very rich man. If that isn't getting a break! The guests must have had more than their $10 worth of entertainment, but a jury will have to decide if they had $25,000 worth.

Lucia Lorain, beautiful German actress, is taking her $100,000 legs to Hollywood. The girls out there wrote the words and music to beautiful legs, but wouldn't you love to find the London bus man and show them to him?

A pretty girl was arrested with $2,000 worth of hard liquor in her car, bringing it from Florida to New Jersey. They took her car and fined her $250. Not a hard life, this being a dry officer. Not by a jugful!

Delicatessen clerks in New York are fresher than a spring rain. An extremely dignified elderly woman from Boston went to one of these stores around the corner from her hotel. A gentle voice asked the young thing in the starched white suit: "Can I get a bottle of milk?"

"Why not?" chirped the clerk, proceeding to wrap up a bottle while he whistled: "If all the stars were pretty babies."

All the world is interested to know of just what ingredients such heroes as Lindbergh are made. The way he has courteously sidestepped millions of kisses and hugs shows they are not made of mush.

A woman buying a dollar dress at a Milwaukee bargain counter, had a rib cracked in the rush, and sued the store for $5,000. The court ruled against her and said in so many words that what happens to a woman at a bargain counter is nobody's business. The providence that takes care of certain others usually hovers over bargain fighters.

Accomplishment

AND is this all the spirit asks to keep it glad always,
A round of duly finished tasks
  That fill the flying days?

So much of toil as years drift past,
  Each labor wisely spent;
Yet does this yield to man at last
  A harvest of content?

Does he, through all his days of strife,
  His toils that never cease,
Add any ray of joy to life
  Or gain from care release?

Who knows? The greatest task to be Achieved by any here
May be to keep unstained and free
  From greed, from grief, from fear!
